Denfeld Refuses Post in London Due to Rebuke

Transit Radio Approved by D. C. Utilities Commission

PUC Holds Music No Peril to Safety, But Opponents Continue Fight

Jingle Bells, Jingle Bells, now the die is cast.
You'll get music while you ride as long as the radios last.
Jingle Bells, Jingle Bells, ring till Judgment Day.
The PUC said yesterday that radio's here to stay.

Deciding the pros and cons, in favor of the pros
The PUC said buses here shall keep their radios.
The same will go for streetcars, and horsecars if they're used.
From what we see, said PUC, the public's not abused.

In prose, not poetry, the District Public Utilities Commission yesterday approved radio programs in Capital Transit vehicles.

Opponents said they will continue their fight against the transit radio setup, and will carry the battle to court.

A Capital Transit spokesman, hailing the PUC decision, said the company will now resume the program to put radio receivers in all the 1500 company vehicles suitable for the installations. About 200 are now radio equipped.

Future installations will be made gradually, the official said.

The formal PUC action was to dismiss its investigation into the question of whether the transit radio broadcasts were consistent with public convenience, comfort and safety.

No Safety Obstacle

Reasons cited by the PUC were:

"From the testimony of record, the conclusion is inescapable that radio reception in streetcars and buses is not an obstacle to safety of operation.

"Further, it is evident that public comfort and convenience is not impaired and that, in fact, through the creation of better will among passengers, it tends to improve the conditions under which the public ride.

"In the light of these conclusions, it is obvious that the installation and use of radios in streetcars and buses of the Capital Transit Co. is not inconsistent with public convenience, comfort and safety."

To Ask Reconsideration

Capital Transit was represented in the radio issue by Attorneys F. G. Awalt and D. A. Myse. Washington Transit Radio, Inc., was represented by Attorney Thomas N. Dowd.

Attorneys Franklin S. Pollak and Guy Martin, who intervened in the interests of opponents to the transit radio setup, met the

Helpless Woman Left in Stolen Car For Eight Hours

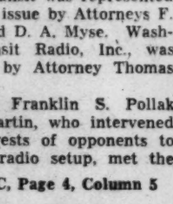

New York, Dec. 19, (AP)—A partly paralyzed little woman was left abandoned in an automobile for almost eight hours today by a thief who stole the car unaware that she was in it.

Miss Esther Silverman, 42, who can hardly walk or talk because of a polio attack at the age of 12, was found huddled in her sister's automobile tonight a few blocks from where it was stolen shortly after 11:30 a.m.

Police said she talked incoherently of her eight-hour wait in the stolen automobile, unable to get out or shout for help because of her affliction.

A police search was launched after her sister, Jean, 34, a door-to-door saleswoman, reported that when she emerged from a Brooklyn building she saw a man drive off with her car in which her sister was sitting almost obscured by packages of household goods.

Harvest of '49 Second Largest In U. S. History

Big Crop Production May Presage Broad Controls for Years

By The Associated Press

United States crop production was the second largest in history this year—and as a result it may be the last year for some time that farmers are free of broad Government controls.

The Agriculture Department's final report of the year yesterday showed that the total output was 132 percent of the 1923-32 average, as compared with last year's record peak of 137.5 percent.

This year's harvested acreage turned out to be the largest since 1932, when depression-ridden farmers sought to offset declining prices by expanding production.

Considering the big acreage, production this year would easily have set a new record had acreage yields equaled last year's. But bad weather during the growing season in some sections kept yields down.

Nevertheless, the harvest is so large that the department has felt

Rep. Thomas' Wife Drops Contest for Husband's Seat

Hackensack, N. J., Dec. 19 (AP). Mrs. J. Parnell Thomas today withdrew as a candidate for the congressional seat to be vacated next month by her imprisoned husband.

The withdrawal left the field open to State Labor Commissioner Harry C. Harper.

"After much deliberation I have decided that I shall not at this time be a candidate for Congress," Mrs. Thomas announced this morning.

"It would be impossible for me to campaign adequately in the brief time which elapses before the special election.

"Therefore, I shall not oppose the selection of Mr. Harper by the organization."

Execution Reported

Hongkong, Tuesday, Dec. 20 (U.P.)—The execution of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, known as the "Young Marshal," who has been under house arrest for 13 years for his part in the kidnapping of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in the famed "Sian Plot," was reported today in unconfirmed advices from Formosa.

In Custody Case

Father Charges Mother Told Tots the Truth About Santa

Whether a mother should tell her young sons that there is no Santa Claus is one of the issues being tried in a District Court divorce-custody case.

The mother who is said to have denied Santa's existence is Mrs. Wandajune Kearney, 33, a Government career worker, of 1445 Ogden st. nw. The husband who made the charge yesterday against his wife is Michael M. Kearney, 36, a lawyer, of 1900 F st. nw.

The sons are 9-year-old Michael and 6-year-old Philip, both temporarily in the father's legal custody but residing with a private family in Silver Spring.

Kearney has charged his wife with desertion and also wants a divorce on grounds of five years' voluntary separation. She has counter-sued for custody and maintenance, charging him with cruelty.

Kearney, in testimony before Judge Jennings Bailey, insisted that Mrs. Kearney is not the better custodian for the children since they become nervous and have a sense of insecurity when they are with her.

"They told me that when they are out with her, they've been roughed up," he said. "She says she is playing but she hits them so hard, they think they are being spanked.

"And recently she told them outright, there is no Santa Claus. She said that a person is foolish to believe in it. Anyone who told them there was a Santa Claus is a liar, they said she told them."

The Kearneys married in 1938 while both were employed in Federal agencies here. They parted

Washington Has 'Balmy' Weather As Winter Nears

Washington was treated to a bit of balmy weather yesterday when the mercury reached 59. And it's expected to reach into the low 60s today.

This condition, attributed to winds from the southwest, is hardly the setting for the official entrapce of winter at 11:24 p. m. Wednesday.

Today will be partly cloudy and mild although the Weather Bureau expects "a little fog" early this morning. The heavy fog of yesterday morning which preceded a sunny, pleasant day resulted in the grounding of planes at National Airport.

The high of 59 recorded at 2:20 p. m. yesterday was far short of a record. Record for the date is 74 set in 1924.

Campbell Quits Justice; Seeks Seat in Senate

Chief of Criminal Unit Plans Race Against Capehart

Alexander M. Campbell has resigned as Assistant Attorney General to run for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Indiana next year.

Campbell

The White House yesterday made public an exchange of letters between President Truman and Campbell. The latter said if he is successful in his bid for the nomination and election "You will have me as a stanch supporter."

Campbell, who has been in charge of the Criminal Division of the Justice Department, will seek the seat now held by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), who is up for reelection next year.

In accepting the resignation December 16, Mr. Truman said:

"You have made a splendid record in the Department of Justice and while I regret you are giving up your present post, in which you have served so well, I understand the considerations which dictate your course at this time.

"You have my sincere good wishes for success and happiness."

Admiral Hits Charge Made By Matthews

Likely to Impair His Influence, Ousted Navy Chief Asserts; Retirement In Doubt

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld has declined the post of American naval commander in Europe on the ground that his removal as Chief of Naval Operations had weakened his ability to deal with military chiefs of other nations.

In a letter to Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, Denfeld declared that the Secretary's charges of lack of "loyalty to my superiors" would be a handicap in his representing the United States in Military Assistance Program negotiations.

Denfeld was relieved as CNO October 27 as a result of sharp criticism of approved war policies and charges that top Administration officials were treating the Navy unfairly.

Denfeld Has Been on Leave

At the time, Matthews offered him the post of commander of naval forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean. Admiral Denfeld has been on leave since November 15, considering whether to accept the offer or to retire.

In his letter to Matthews, dated December 14, declining the European job, the admiral said he had not yet decided whether to apply for retirement or accept another post. Presumably, his decision will turn on what alternative position he now may be offered.

However, friends of Denfeld hold the firm opinion that he will not accept another Navy job.

Denfeld wrote Matthews that the latter's charge that he lacked "loyalty" and did not have the "respect for authority" he should have, made his acceptance of the European job impossible.

Some Assignments Acceptable

"While there are assignments in which I could serve inside the Navy without fear that my loyalty to the best interests of this Nation would be questioned," he declared, "it could conceivably happen that other nations having read of this public accusation, would not have the necessary respect for, and confidence in me."

Furthermore, Denfeld wrote, events since he testified on Capitol Hill would put him "under an undesirable restraint on the vital matter of frank discussion" of MAP questions.

"My views on combined strategy, and particularly on naval participation in any arrangements whereby the countries concerned should be defended in the event of an emergency, might reopen the recent controversy to the embarrassment of my colleagues, my superiors and our Government."

Denfeld noted that his leave of absence would expire January 19, and said he is considering whether or not to apply for retirement.

"If I decide to remain on active duty," he added, "I shall be glad, of course, to serve in any assignment that you may choose in which the handicaps imposed by recent events will not be present."

Navy officials said yesterday that Denfeld's refusal of the London job leaves the question of a new Naval Academy superintendent "up in the air." Earlier it had been announced that Admiral Richard Conolly, now European naval commander, would be given the Annapolis post if Denfeld relieved him.

Head of Syria's Army Seized In Third Coup in 10 Months

Damascus, Syria, Dec. 19 (AP).—A coup within the army today overthrew Gen. Sami Hennawi, the commander in chief who was accused of being the power behind the scenes in Syria's government.

Col. Adeeb Sheishakli, leader in the third of Syria's turbulent upsets in less than 10 months, announced that the army had acted to safeguard the country's Republican regime. He accused Hennawi of conspiring with unnamed foreign powers.

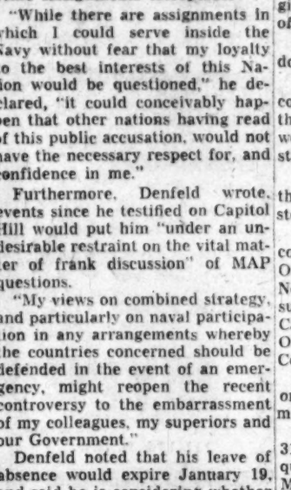

Arab sources in Cairo said they believed one faction of the army acted to forestall plans of other military factions to unite Syria with either Iraq or Hashemite Jordan or perhaps both.

(Unconfirmed Damascus dispatches to the Cairo newspaper Al Balagh said sounds of gunfire were heard in the Syrian capital Monday morning. The Azmi Press Agency in Cairo said there were indications the coup had met resistance. Troops were said to have surrounded the city, occupied key buildings and arrested several persons, including members of the Constituent assembly.)

General Hennawi, who led the coup of August 14 in which President Marshal Husni Zayim was executed, was arrested along with his brother-in-law and chief civilian aide, Assad Talas, the Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs.

Colonel Sheishakli, as spokesman for the Supreme War Council, described the action as a "disciplinary measure within the army." He declared it was not a political coup and that the army would not interfere in politics unless the nation's safety demanded it.

Conditions appeared normal in the country, but aging Premier Attassi was not sworn in as acting president, as scheduled, because of a "sudden illness."

Labor Board Counsel Acts

T-H Rule on Union-Shop Vote Waived for Building Trades

By The Associated Press

Robert N. Denham, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, yesterday disclosed a policy of waiving the Taft-Hartley law's union-shop election requirement for the building industry.

Denham asked the board to go along with his decision. But he made it clear to newsmen that he intends to carry it out anyway.

As the law's top enforcement officer, Denham has discretion on accepting or rejecting charges of T-H violations. So he is in a position to go ahead.

The NLRB gave no indication of what its action may be.

The major builder and contractor groups joined with AFL building trades unions in asking the NLRB to go along with Denham.

Taft-Hartley barred the closed shop. This is the condition where only union members are permitted to be hired. But the law allowed a union shop. This permits any one to be hired, but he must become a union member within a short period.

The law, however, put one condition on even the union shop. This was that before it was legal, the employes had to approve it in an election held by the NLRB.

NLRB Chairman Paul Herzog questioned Denham on how it was possible to waive any provision of the law. He said any change seemed to be the duty of Congress, rather than the board or its general counsel.

Herzog recalled a recent Supreme Court ruling in which he said the NRLB was reversed and told not to ignore any portion of T-H. But Denham said he felt his idea squared with the ruling.

U. S., Britain, Canada To Standardize Arms, Tactics and Training

Integrating of North Atlantic Defenses Begun in Agreement Announced Jointly

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Britain, Canada and the United States yesterday announced that arrangements have been completed on a broad program for the standardization of weapons, tactics and military procedures.

The long-range plan to coordinate the military effort of the three nations marks a step toward integrating the North Atlantic Pact defense forces, said simultaneous announcements in Washington, Ottawa and London.

Officials emphasized that the program would be a "gradual development," aiming at common designs in new equipment to be procured in future years rather than modification of existing equipment to any extent.

Staff officers of the Department of Defense predicted that it would be five years before there will be any "actual standardization of hardware" in the armed forces of the three nations, barring a war.

Manuals To Be Similar

But far short of this time, it is believed, there should be much progress toward standardization of tactics, manuals, operating procedures and training systems.

The defense staff officers said that there are few limits to the fields in which coordination will be sought by "working level agencies." Atomic weapons are excluded. It was indicated, along with other "nonconventional" arms.

Carrier Landing Techniques

Standardization of blueprints, specifications and technical terminology form an important field of endeavor. Other areas in which it is under way include:

Conversion of British and Canadian naval pilots to American aircraft carrier landing techniques.

Adoption of uniform communication methods and systems, including such things as a standard method of talking over the telephone or voice radio between planes and ground headquarters, ships and planes, tanks and infantry command posts. Methods of issuing commands would be standard.

Thus, for example, the American "hello" might replace the British "are you there."

Work is already under way at working levels in a number of fields, such as standard antisubmarine warfare techniques and procedures, staff officers said.

It is expected that standarization

Guilty on 9 of 17 Charges

Von Mannstein Given 18 Years For War Crimes as Nazi Chief

Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—A British military court today found Nazi Field Marshal Erich von Mannstein guilty of war crimes and sentenced the 62-year-old commander of German troops on the Russian front to 18 years' imprisonment.

The white-haired Prussian, master strategist of German armies in the east, was the last Nazi leader to face an Allied war crimes tribunal. He was found guilty of 9 of the 17 charges against him and could have been sentenced to death.

Mannstein's face whitened as the court announced each finding of guilty, but he did not move, nor did his face betray any emotion when the sentence was pronounced.

The military tribunal ruled that Mannstein, among other charges:

Deliberately and recklessly disregarded his duty as commander

British Stop Imports of U. S. Fuel Oil

Gasoline Purchases Cut by Third in Move To Save Scarce Dollars

London, Dec. 19 (AP).—Britain has ordered American oil companies to stop all fuel oil imports and cut gasoline imports by one third beginning January 1, an oil company official said today.

Object of the slashes is to save dollars.

The oil man said American oil companies selling in Britain felt the move was the "thin edge of a wedge to squeeze us out of the sterling market."

The British Minstry of Fuel said the oil would be obtained from sterling-financed companies.

The cuts affect three American companies: The Anglo-American Oil Co., owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey; Vacuum Oil Co., Ltd., subsidiary of Socony-Vacuum, and Cal-Tex, a subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of California and the Texas Co.

They have been supplying about one-third of Britain's 18 million metric tons of petroleum yearly.

During the year ended March 31, 1949, Britain's dollar oil requirements were estimated by the Marshall Plan at 200 million dollars. The Marshall Plan financed 166 million dollars, or about five sixths of these dollar oil purchases.

During the year ending next March 31 Britain's dollar oil requirements were estimated slightly lower.

Safety Exhibit Haunted by Jinx After One Death

Pittsburgh, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Twice in 48 hours a 14-year-old jalopy proved a jinx to the Better Traffic Committee of Pittsburgh.

Henry Neaman, 26, Pittsburgh stunt man, was killed Saturday when he drove the ancient car in a staged head-on crash as part of a safety program.

Yesterday city officials exhibited the death car in a traffic circle as a "horrible example" of highway accidents.

George Timocko, 27, crashed his car into the wrecked jalopy and he and a passenger, Michael Dzuraniana, 27, were injured.

U. S. Warned Again on Ships In China Ports

New Note Is Delayed; 'Week of Grace' Given Foreign Craft Expires

The Chinese Nationalists have sent a new warning to the United States that foreign vessels must keep out of Shanghai and other Communist-held ports.

The State Department published the text yesterday. It gave foreign shipping in Chinese territorial waters "one week of grace" to depart. The period expired yesterday.

The Nationalist note, dispatched through the American consul general at Taipei, Formosa, was delayed and was not received here until Friday, the State Department said.

The department has sent copies to the Isbrandtsen Co., New York, and other American shippers to reinforce Saturday's American official warning that Shanghai and its approaches are a "zone of danger" that American vessels should avoid.

O'Dwyers Plan Yacht Trip After Wedding Today

Stuart, Fla., Dec. 19 (AP)—Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York told newsmen today he decided to be married in Florida after he arrived in the State and improved from his recent illness.

His original intention was to wed Miss Elizabeth Sloan Simpson, 33-year-old former model, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, on January 2.

O'Dwyer, 59, and the Texas-born brunette will go on an eight-day yachting honeymoon after the wedding here Tuesday.

The ceremony in St. Joseph's Catholic Church is set for 8:30 a. m. There will be no reception and the couple will leave immediately for the yacht Almar II.

David J. Martin, general manager of the New York Athletic Club, will be best man. Dr. and Mrs. Edward M. Bernecker have chaperoned Miss Simpson since her arrival, and Mrs. Bernecker will be the bride's only attendant.

Decartelization Involved

I. G. Farben Stockholders Seek To Break Control by Allies

Frankfurt, Dec. 19 (NYHT)—A protective association of I. G. Farben stockholders today called a press conference to launch a campaign to end Allied control of the huge industrial combine and turn the Farben decartelization problem over to the German government.

With thorough preparation of a program, the stockholders group timed its proposal well. The Allies are having such legal troubles getting any kind of decartelization program under way the group's spokesman was led to hint that perhaps the Allies would not be doing anything about selling Farben properties anyway.

The German government, meanwhile, is drafting its own decartelization legislation, with the aim of coordinating a program with the Allied High Commission. It was to the German government that the stockholders appealed.

The stockholders plan is to break the Farben empire into three units, one in the French zone, one in the American zone and one in the British zone. Present stockholders under the plan then would turn in their old I. G. Farben stocks and get new stock in one of the three new combines.

The Allied objections to the plan are that it does not alter the ownership of the I. G. Farben combine and it does not alter the economic structure. The Allies instead are trying to work out plans for splitting out individual industries, such as photographic dyestuffs, drugs and medicines, cellophane, etc., and decartelizing the combine in this fashion. The German plan they contend, would simply be a mask for leaving Farben more or less intact.

Atlantic Pact Economic Group Holds 1st Session

Paris, Dec. 19 (NYHT).—The Economic and Financial Committee of the Atlantic Pact held its first meeting today at the French Finance Ministry and decided to appoint a permanent working group with headquarters at London.

The committee's job may best be described as coordination of the defense expenditures of the 12 pact members so there is no contradiction with the Marshall Plan program.

Countries participating in the Marshall Plan have agreed they must balance their national budgets.

French Finance Minister Maurice Petsche said after the meeting: "The budget of the 12 has not been fixed."

The inference was that in spite of the billion dollars in arms aid which the western European countries expect to receive from the United States in the next six months, they face difficulties in working out a coordinated program of defense expenditures that each country can reconcile with its own budgetary resources.

Taylor 'Astonished' At Resignation Rumor

Rome, Dec. 19 (NYHT).—Myron C. Taylor, President Truman's special representative at the Vatican, today declined to discuss a report that he intends to resign.

"I won't talk about it," he said, adding, "I am very much astonished."

Kennan Plans Tour Of Latin America

For Non-Red Asia

U. S. to Put Heroes in 'Comic Book'

The State Department has turned to the comic book technique to tell non-Communist Asia about American heroes.

Officials said yesterday that an experimental order for 260,000 copies of a picture story series on great Americans is scheduled for delivery next month.

They will be sent to South Korea, Thailand, Viet Nam (French Indo-China) and Indonesia. The hope is that through hand-to-hand circulation information about the history and background of the United States will be spread widely in areas under strong Communist pressure.

The new series will include 32-page pamphlets on the careers of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Walt Whitman, Abraham Lincoln, Andrew Carnegie, Jane Addams, Thomas A. Edison and George Washington Carver, the Negro scientist and educator. Wording is in the native languages.

Libraries and other agencies of the State Department's Public Affairs Division already on the scene will distribute the booklets, at public showing of American documentary films and on other such occasions.

American libraries operate in all the countries.

The first order was prepared by three artists under direction of Philip Copp, New York publisher. The cost was $24,000, with lower costs expected for additional copies.

The cover is in two colors, but the drawings are black and white. Sturdy paper was ordered so that pamphlets will withstand long hand-to-hand distribution.

The State Department announced yesterday that the 20 United States ambassadors in Latin America will meet in Havana January 18 and at Rio de Janeiro March 1.

George Kennan, department counselor, and Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, jr., who is in charge of Latin American affairs, will attend the Rio meeting. For Kennan, Rio will be one stop on a tour of Latin America for an on-the-spot check of United States relations.

The State Department said that the two meetings are in line with the new policy of getting American envoys together in various parts of the world ti "discuss matters of mutual interest in their area."

Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, told a news conference that a similar meeting scheduled for American diplomats in South Africa, January 9, has been postponed. McDermott said the reason is that Assistant Secretary of State George McGhee, who is now visiting India, will be delayed and unable to attend this session until later.

Kennan, long-time chief of Secretary Acheson's policy planning staff, expects to begin a two-year leave of absence next summer to study and lecture. He is giving up his policy-planning post January 1 but will remain as counselor until starting the leave.

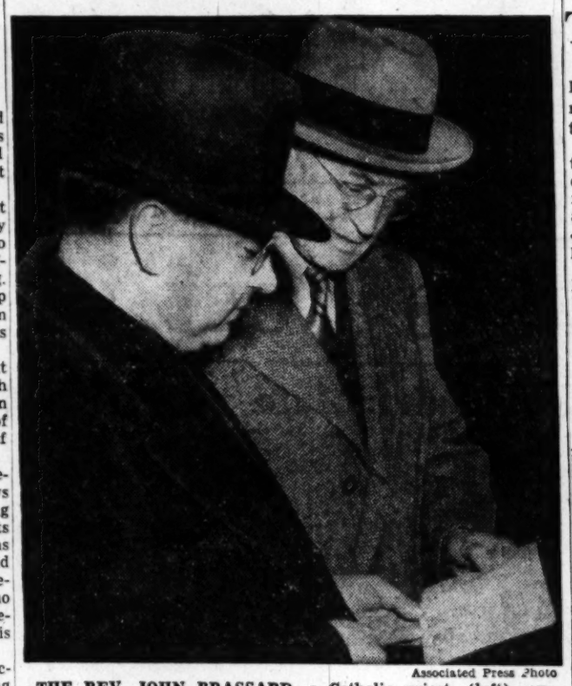

Vandenberg Here Thursday, Ready For New Session

Detroit, Dec. 19, (NYHT).—With his health considerably improved, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Michigan Republican, will return to Washington Thursday in preparation for the opening of Congress on January 3, it was learned today.

Senator Vandenberg underwent an operation at the University of Michigan Hospital last fall at which time surgeons removed most of one lung, which had bothered the Republican spokesman on foreign policy for several years.

His health is considerably improved after sixty days of convalescence at his home in Grand Rapids. The Senator will be accompanied by Mrs. Vandenberg, and will spend the time before Congress convenes on catching up on the latest developments in international affairs.

Priest Gets Soviet Visa

THE REV. JOHN BRASSARD, a Catholic priest, (left), examines the Soviet visa on his passport as he and Michael Francis Doyle, a Philadelphia layman, leave the Russian Embassy here yesterday. Father Brassard, a teacher at Assumption College, Worcester, Mass., is going to Moscow to serve the American colony

Russians Will Admit Priest To Serve American Colony

After 10 months' delay, Russia has agreed to let an American Roman Catholic priest go to Moscow to serve the American colony.

State Department officials yesterday disclosed the Soviet government has advised it is now ready to issue a passport visa and a travel permit to Father John Brassard, who first started pressing for action last February.

Father Brassard will succeed Father J. Antonio Laberge, who left Moscow last year after serving as pastor of Moscow's only Roman Catholic Church, St. Louis of the French. Father Brassard was named to succeed him, but was unable to obtain a visa, despite strong State Department backing.

The 1933 agreement by which the United States extended diplomatic recognition to the Soviet regime provided that an American priest would be permitted to serve the small United States official colony in Moscow.

Since Father Laberge's departure, the Soviet authorities have taken over control of the St. Louis Church and installed a priest of their own choosing. A French priest, however, has been permitted to conduct services of about one hour daily, officials said. They said they did not know what will be Father Brassard's relations with the St. Louis Church.

U. S. Warned Again on Ships in China Ports

mott said the latest Nationalist note was received after Saturday's warning was drafted and did not affect State Department policy.

He said that as far as is known no American ships are now in Shanghai or other Chinese territorial areas.

The Isbrandtsen Co. operates two ships that have been fired on and damaged near Shanghai. The latest incident was an attack on the Sir John Franklin by two Nationalist warships on November 28. The company has demanded repeatedly that its ships be protected by the U. S. Government.

The Chinese note said that from now on "any foreign vessels which, in violation of this order, should hit any mine, sustain any damage and losses or encounter any risk, obviously must assume responsibility themselves."

It added that "the Chinese government will take such effective measures as may be deemed necessary."

Nationalists Claim Recapture of Kunming

Taipeh, Formosa, Dec. 19 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists tonight announced they had recaptured Kunming, which they lost in a revolt December 10.

The loyal Twenty-sixth Army, led by Gen. Yu Cheng-wan, was declared to have retaken the city at 4:30 p. m.

Lu Han, governor of Yunnan province, who led the coup that had taken the capital and province to the Communist side, was reported fleeing westward with his troops along the Burma road.

Nationalist air force headquarters stated it had established radio contact with the Kunming airfield at 5 a. m. while a sporadic battle was in progress. It said the rebel troops made only scattered resistance before fleeing.

In Taipeh, Nationalist police were busy trying to keep order outside the British consulate, besieged by hundreds of persons seeking visas to go to Hongkong. Other hundreds were coming from Hongkong to Formosa.

The rush in both directions resulted from reports of imminent British recognition of the Communist regime. It was learned that the Nationalist government is prepared to sever relations with Britain the moment Britain recognizes the Reds.

ERP Aide Indorses Italian Land Splitup

Rome, Dec. 19 (AP). — The United States has come out in favor of Premier Alcide de Gasperi's hotly contested plan to carve up Italy's ancient estates among the nation's landless peasantry.

James D. Zellerbach, European Recovery Program (ERP) chief for Italy, pledged full support yesterday for the government's proposal to redistribute more than 100,000 acres of privately-owned land in the Sila area of Calabria.

De Gasperi's plan, now before Parliament, may be the forerunner of a nation-wide scheme to distribute 3,700,000 acres of landed estates —mostly idle, or only partially cultivated — among nearly 500,000 landless peasants.

Land distribution is strongly opposed by large landowners and political conservatives who fear it may disrupt Italy's agricultural economy and reduce production.

Already the situation has inspired bloody land-grabbing raids as peasants, led by Communists, invaded private farmlands.

There are about 1.5 Italians to every acre of arable land, one of the densest populations in Europe.

Under tentative proposals, an estate would be required to contribute three million acres to a nation-wide land "pool." An additional 500,000 to 700,000 acres will be added later.

U.S. Protest Is Rejected By Bulgaria

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 19 (U.P.). Defying a veiled United States threat to curtail diplomatic relations, Bulgaria today rejected a State Department protest against the mention of Sofia Minister Donald Read Heath's name in the trial of former Bulgarian Deputy Premier Traicho Kostov.

But Bulgarian Foreign Minister Vassil Kolarov agreed to ask Bulgarian papers to publish Heath's denial that he was involved in espionage with Kostov or any other of the 10 Communists tried with him.

The Bulgarian state-controled news service reported that Kolarov said the Foreign Ministry could not accept any protest affecting the public prosecutor's indictment in the Kostov trial and could not prevent the mention of Heath's name.

Kostov was hanged Friday after he and 10 codefendants were found guilty on charges of treason and espionage for the United States and Britain. Some of the spying was alleged to have been conducted on Heath's instructions.

Bulgarian Voters Reported 97.66% Pure

Sofia, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Sofia Radio said today that 97.66 percent of Bulgaria's registered voters supported the government on the basis of nearly complete returns from yesterday's general election.

The boadcast said that of 4,751,849 registered voters, 4,698,979 went to the polls and 4,588,899 approved the single-slate list of candidates put up by the coalition of ruling parties, the Fatherland Front.

In all Bulgaria the opposition vote totaled only 110,080, according to radio figures. Bulgarians voting against the regime had a choice of casting a blank ballot or writing an anti-government slogan on the ballot.

Czech Charges U.S., Britain Ordered 3 Revolts

Prague, Dec. 19 (U.P.) — Rudolf Slansky, secretary of the Czechoslovakian Communist Party, today charged that the United States and Britain ordered three separate, unsuccessful revolts against the government here this year.

Slansky, one of the most important Communists in the country, made the accusations in the latest issue of the Cominform Journal, a copy of which reached Prague today.

Slansky said the regime had smashed all three of the alleged attempts to seize power, but "almost every day" more spies and saboteurs trained by the British and the Americans were arrested.

"During this year alone," he wrote, "we exposed and prevented three attempts to carry out a putsch and it has been fully proved in all these cases that the anti-state putsch groups received instructions from the United States or British embassies."

It was one of the most outspoken attacks yet made by a responsible leader in Czechoslovakia against the United States and Britain.

Slansky said the American and British spies worked with agents of Yugoslavia.

(During the trials of Lazlo Rajk and Traicho Kostov, the Hungarian and Bulgarian governments both charged that the United States, Britain and Yugoslavia were collaborating to work against the peoples' democracies.)

Referring to the bitter 11-month-old church-state struggle, Slansky again accused the Czech Catholic hierarchy of serving as a "weapon of the Anglo-American imperialists."

"We know the struggle against church reaction will be neither easy nor short," he said.

District Faces Fare Increase, Cut in Service

The Capital Transit Co. will ask the Public Utilities Commission for an increase in fares, probably in a week or two, officials indicated yesterday in the wake of Sunday's wage raise awards.

The decision of the arbitration board, which is binding on both the company and the union representing 4300 employes, awarded a wage increase of 10 cents an hour and other benefits.

Transit company officials, who estimated the decision would cost the company about $1,172,000 a year, would not guess at the amount of the fare increase to be asked, but indicated it probably would be combined with a cut in bus and streetcar service.

50,000 in Back Wages

The retroactive wages provided for by the decision, estimated at an additional $500,000, will be paid as soon as the accounting work can be done and probably by January 1, a company official said. The pay hike is retroactive to July 1.

President William F. Simms of the union, Division 689, Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes, said he was disappointed in some parts of the award.

He said he felt the employes "got smacked quite a bit" on the pay increase, holiday, and "spread time" awards. The union had asked for 25 cents more an hour.

The holiday provision grants Thanksgiving and Christmas overtime pay or the day off without loss of pay. The union had asked for eight holidays per year.

Eleven-Hour Limit

As for "spread" time, overtime will be paid to men whose eight hours of work are spread out beyond 11 hours. The union wanted a 10-hour limit.

Chairman Alfred A. Colby, of the arbitration board, said the reasoning on which the decision was based will be included in an opinion to be released, probably next week.

He sai dthe board considered every factor deemed relevant to the case, and also "the interest of the public, which is always present in every labor dispute."

He added he thought it "reasonable" to say the decision was fair and impartial, in view of the fact that both the company and union representatives on the board dissented and the impartial members were in full agreemnt.

Democrats Back Boisvert For PUC Post

The District Democratic Central Committee has unanimously recommended Harold V. Boisvert, law professor at National University, for appointment to the Public Utilities Commission, it was learned last night.

Gerhard van Arkel, committee secretary, said he recently wrote a letter on behalf of the committee to William J. Boyle, jr., Democratic National Committee chairman, indorsing Boisvert, a committee member and former District president of the Young Democrats.

A vacancy on the PUC was created by the resignation of James W. Lauderdale on December 1.

Boisvert, 32, a native of Waterloo, N. Y., and a graduate of Notre Dame University, has been a law professor at National University since September, 1948. He moved to Washington in 1941, and received his law degree from Catholic University in 1947.

During the war, Boisvert saw action in the Pacific as a Navy lieutenant commander. Married, he lives at 1900 Lamont st. nw.

Dime Store Hunch Pays Off; Missing Girls Are Found

A Washington detective assured a merry Christmas for two Duluth, Minn., families yesterday when he located two teen-age girls missing since August 31.

The girls are Molly Yvonne Upton, 15, and Darilyn Olson, 14.

Recently the Duluth police wrote to local police. One of the girls had written home that she was married and letters would reach her at 1234 Pleasant st. se.

Detective Richard R. Cranford of the Missing Persons Bureau reasoned the girls might be employed at a 5-and-10-cent store. He located the Upton girl working in a Woolworth's store at 1231 Good Hope rd. se.

The other girl was picked up at the Pleasant st. address. They were sent to the receiving home pending word from Duluth.

Radio to Stay, PUC Rules

PUC decision with this announcement:

"A party desiring to appeal to the court from a decision of the (PUC) commission must file an application for reconsideration with the commission within 30 days. We will do that and we will state then our views on what the commission has said and not said. If the commission adheres to its present decision we shall appeal to the United States District Court in accordance with law."

Claude N. Palmer, president of the Transit Riders' Association, a group formed to oppose transit radio broadcasts, voiced disappointment at the PUC decision.

He said it appeared the PUC "has not touched upon the basic question involved which is the riding public's right to resist any and all attempts at commercial schemes for treating it as a 'captive audience'."

Palmer said the association's executive committee will meet promptly to discuss further moves, and that a membership meeting will be called soon.

He predicted the case might go through prolonged court action. During that time, he said, it would be a mistake for the transit firm to install more radios.

U. N. Group Stalls On Jerusalem Control Problem

Lake Success, Dec. 19 (NYHT).—The United Nations Trusteeship Council today abandoned hope of immediate progress on the internationalization of Jerusalem and decided instead to gather information from all concerned for consideration when it convenes in Geneva on January 19.

Roger Garreau of France, council president, was assigned to gather the views of many countries, including Israel and Jordan, both of which had told the U. N. they will not permit internationalization of the city they now share in occupation.

The vote was 11 to 0, with Russia abstaining.

Mrs. Heiberg May Buy Back Part of Airfield U. S. Used

She doesn't want it; she doesn't need it; but she may have to take it for Christmas.

"She" is Mrs. Louise Cromwell Brooks MacArthur Atwill Heiberg, 3300 O st. nw.

"It" is part of Drew Field, in Tampa, Fla., one of the Government's largest wartime air bases.

Mrs. Heiberg has been notified by the Government that for $450 she can buy back the 14 acres of Drew Field, which her mother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, sold the Government a few years before she died in 1946.

The former wife of Gen. Douglast MacArthur and British actor Lionel Atwill said yesterday: "The price is certainly reasonable, but what in the world do I want with an airfield?"

Her present husband, Col. Alf Heiberg, was head of the Air Force band which dedicated Drew Field, she said.

U. S., Britain Plan Standardized Arms

of small arms and artillery will result in designating all guns in terms of millimeters instead of calibers. Thus, the Garand .30-caliber American rifle would be called a 7.62 millimeter weapon.

It, rather than the British .303 rifle probably will become standard for the three English-speaking armies, it is understood.

The tripartite announcement emphasized that what had been completed were "arrangements for collaboration in standardization." "No treaty, executive agreement or contractual obligation has been entered into," it was declared.

"These arrangements will insure that in time of necessity there will be no material or technical obstacles to full cooperation among the armed forces concerned and the greatest possible economy in the use of combined resources and effort will be obtained," the announcement stated.

Exchange Observers

The work will be carried on by exchange of observers who will witness tests of new weapons and operation of techniques and operational procedures in war games.

Greatest present emphasis in the program is being placed on standardization of basic army equipment, such as small arms, artillery and tanks, though signal corps, quartermaster, medical and other equipment is involved. The United States Army has a permanent mission of 19 officers in England and 10 in Canada, staff officers said, with comparable missions in this country.

Work toward air force and navy standardization largely is being accomplished by exchange of visits of officials and technicians.

Standardization of warships will be confined to smaller types, it was said, though the equipment and weapons carried by submarines, aircraft carriers, cruisers, etc. come under the program.

Standard Tank Unlikely

Nor is there liable to be an attempt to build a standard tank. Rather the effort would be to make the guns and general characteristics similar, at least for the present, staff officials said.

The three-power standardization plans—which have been underway since 1947—will be partially merged with wider arrangements under the North Atlantic Treaty Military Production and Supply Board. They are somewhat similar to arrangements made between the Brussels Pact powers.

However, it is expected that the collaboration between Britain, Canada and the United States will be closer than the general standardization under the Atlantic Pact.

Eventually, member nations of the security alliance will be asked to turn out the weapons they best can make and pool them with other countries.

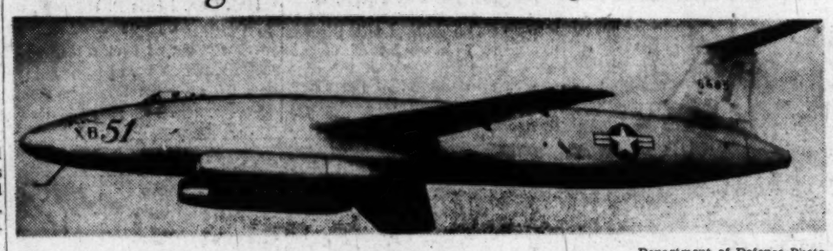

Russia is understood to have a similar standardization program underway with its satellites.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan refused today to dismiss a spy conspiracy count against Judith Coplon and Valentin A. Gubitchev.

Storm Ebbs In Europe on U. S. Arms Aid

London, Dec. 19 (AP).—A storm that developed last week over American arms aid to Europe seemed to be blowing itself out.

Informed sources here predicted relatively smooth sailing in Washington for future negotiations by which Atlantic Treaty nations will share a billion dollars in American military aid funds.

This view was shared in other capitals of western Europe. Reliable informants there said compromises already agreed upon would permit speedy signing of individual pacts with the United States. The pacts are required by the United States Arms Aid Act.

The storm began with British rejection of some terms of the draft agreement. Followed by similar action by Denmark and Norway. These latter countries objected particularly to admitting large American military missions to help set up the arms aid they need.

One informed source here said "an extremely poor presentation" of the program by Washington contributed to the disagreements.

It was said Britain had:

1. Strong objections to any provision that would restrict Britain from sending arms to Malaya or other "trouble spots" or in selling her own manufactured equipment to prospective buyers.

2. Fears she would become financially responsible for American forces and missions stationed here.

3. Fears acceptance of the American conditions might furnish ammunition against the government in the approaching election.

The latest situation on aid in the other countries concerned is:

France — Agreement apparently reached after withdrawal of a United States proviso limiting use of arms to the North Atlantic only. That will permit France to use them in Indo-China or elsewhere.

Belgium—Negotiations in Washington are proceeding "smoothly."

Italy—The American Embassy denied charges in the Italian Communist press that Joseph E. Jacobs, due in Rome as special assistant for the program, will be a military "czar" giving orders to the Italian army.

Netherlands—No major obstacles.

No problems reported from Portugal, Iceland, and Luxembourg.

U. S. Reduces Size Of Two Arms Missions

The State Department has decided to cut by two-thirds the size of American military missions that are to go to Denmark and Norway to supervise United States arms shipments.

Eight alleged members of a machinegun-equipped gang held responsible for a series of holdups here were indicted yesterday by the District grand jury on charges ranging from unauthorized use of an auto to robbery and carrying a deadly weapon.

Five indictments of robbery and four of carrying a deadly weapon were levied against one of the gang—Virgil Crymes, 21, of 2308 Pomeroy rd. se.

Other alleged members indicted on various robbery and weapon charges were: Robert P. Young, 22, of 741 Howard rd. se.; Clarence Jackson, 39, of 1919-A Benning rd. se.; Owen Wright, 24, of 2915 Stanton rd. se.; Alvin Prue, 18, of 2415 Pomeroy rd. se.; Lloyd White, 23, of 1837 California st. nw.; Paul E. Gathard, 18, of 2425 18th st. se., and Frederick D. McDowell, 22, of 706 Howard rd. se.

Man Held Up in Home

One of the crimes charged to members of the gang was the holdup of Theodore W. Brooking, 130 D st. se., early on November 28. According to police, Crymes admitted covering Brookings with a machinegun at his home while two others displaying pistols relieved Brooking of $218.

Crymes and Gathard were indicted in the holdup of a Capital Transit bus driver at 62d and Dix sts. ne. last November 20, in which 400 tokens and $10 in change were taken. Crymes, Prue, Wright and White were indicted in the robbery of another bus driver November 28, in which $36 and 40 passes were stolen.

Crymes, Young, McDowell and Jackson were indicted in the holdup of a tourist home at 1318 Rhode Island ave. nw. November 26. A total of $70.90 was taken.

Six indictments charging robbery and the carrying of a dangerous weapon were returned against Hassell R. Poindexter, 20, Congress Hotel. Four of the indictments charged hotel robberies, and the remaining two involved stores.

Accused in Hotel Holdup

Poindexter was charged with the holdup of a clerk at the Central Hotel, 903 New York ave. nw., on November 20; the holdup of the night clerk at the Adams House, 1006 I st. nw., also on November 20; two holdups of employes of the Crown Hotel, 933 H st. nw., on November 17 and 19, respectively; holdup of a liquor store at 907 H st. nw., November 4; and the holdup of a clothing store at 901 9th st. nw., October 27. A total of $1435 was taken.

Elbert W. Scott, 36, of 1241 6½ st. nw., was indicted on a second-degree murder charge in the fatal beating of Myrtle Scott, with whom he lived. She died in Freedmen's Hospital November 12.

Livingston H. Hill, 54, of 4925 Lee st. nw., was indicted on a charge of attempting to obstruct justice. Police said Hill threatened to do bodily harm to Joseph A. Caetto, 1900 U pl. se., if the latter appeared as a witness against Hill in a case involving larceny after trust. A total of 39 indictments was returned. Charges were ignored in five cases.

Air Flip-Flop Costs Pilot His License

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday dismissed the petition of a former American Airlines pilot fighting loss of his license for alleged recklessness.

The pilot is Charles R. Sisto of Los Angeles. According to the charges, he caused the plane to flip over and plunge and narrowly missed crashing it on a flight between the West Coast and Texas. Forty-nine passengers were aboard.

The Appeals Court said that the evidence showed Sisto while en route pulled a gust lock, a device to be used only on the ground. This locked the ailerons, elevators and rudders and threw the passengers and the pilot out of their seats.

The ship, a DC-4, was righted by action of another pilot when it was only 500 feet from the ground, the court found.

Sisto's license was revoked by the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Australians Seek To Cut Overhead

Canberra, Dec. 19 (AP).—Australia's anti socialist coalition took over the reins of government today, leading off with a shakeup of public service departments whose personnel has quadrupled since the beginning of the war.

Premier Robert Gordon Menzies told his ministers to make a thorough probe of their departments with a view to cutting down the overhead.

Menzies, Dame Enid Lyons, first woman minister in the commonwealth's history and 17 other cabinet ministers were sworn in today by Gov.-Gen. William J. McKell, representing King George VI.

Health Minister Sir Earle Page indicated tonight that one of the new regime's first acts of legislation will be to implement the government's national health scheme.

Medical Conference Set

Page said he will call a conference of doctors, dentists and nurses early next month to iron out the existing deadlock among professional bodies.

Nearly 6000 doctors have boycotted the free medicine scheme which came into being in June, 1948. Last March the Health Ministry presented a bill to compel physicians to cooperate in the scheme.

In October Australia's highest court declared invalid the clause giving certain medicines to the public free. Physicians had opposed the measure, because only a limited list of free drugs was made available. Doctors said this hindered treatment.

Dame Enid, widow of former Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons and first woman member of the House of Representatives, became vice president of the executive council. She will preside at council meetings when Menzies is absent.

Arthur Fadden Is Deputy

Sworn in with Menzies were 13 members of his own Liberal Party and 5 members of the Country Party.

Arthur William Fadden, leader of the Country Party and a former Prime Minister, was sworn in as deputy Prime Minister and treasurer, next to Menzies in rank.

Other new cabinet ministers include:

External Affairs and External Territories (foreign ministers)—Percy C. Spender, a lawyer, Menzies' army minister in the first war cabinet in 1940-41. He succeeds Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, onetime president of the United Nations General Assembly.

Defense and Postwar Reconstruction—Eric J. Harrison, member of the House since 1931, deputy leader of the opposition since 1944.

Labor, National Service and Immigration—Harold E. Holt, Minister of Labor in 1940-41.

Supply, Development, Works and Housing—Richard G. Casey, first Australian Minister to Washington.

Janitor Acquitted

A District Court jury yesterday acquitted James W. Fairfax, 76, a janitor, of taking indecent liberties with a 6-year-old girl on August 4.

Nova Scotia Mayor Held In Murder

Sydney, Nova Scotia, Dec. 19 (U.P.). Dan Jack MacLean, who won the mayor's race in a protested election two weeks ago, today was charged with the murder of the city's crippled voting registrar.

Crying, "Stop, Jack, Stop!" Registrar Joseph MacKinnon, 65, was knocked from his crutch and run over twice by an automobile in a dark alley last night. He died in a hospital from skull injuries.

The mayor, who was reelected to the post he had long held in extremely close balloting December 6, was under heavy police guard at a hospital where he was treated for a cut hand.

Witnesses told city officers and Royal Canadian Mounted Police the license number of the car they said ground over MacKinnon last night. Authorities said it was the number of the mayor's car.

"I heard screams and at first I thought it was a cat," said 14-year-old Jackie MacEachern, who told police he saw the automobile run over MacKinnon, then roll back over the head.

The mayor was arrested early today at his home and taken to the hospital for treatment of his hand wound.

A provincial pathologist was summoned from Halifax to examine blood stains found on the mayor's damaged car.

MacLean was elected mayor of Sydney for the fifth time when he defeated Steelworker Victor Coffin by a scant 131 votes.

MacKinnon, the voting registrar, was besieged with complaints from Coffin's supporters, charging that many taxpayers' names had been excluded from the voters' list.

Disappointment Averted

London, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Donald Andrews, 29-year-old former RAF pilot on trial for murder of his wife, told arresting police he shot her because he had drawn all the money out of their joint bank account and "could not bear to let her know."

To develop leadership qualities among the Nation's youth, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks will award 11 college scholarships of $300 this year, it was announced yesterday.

3 Servicemen Go on Trial In Rape Case

Three servicemen went on trial yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court, Rockville, Md., on charges that they raped a Bethesda governess last September.

The State concluded its case in less than four hours. After four witnesses testified for the defense, the trial was continued until Friday by Judge Stedman Prescott.

The defendants, all patients at Bethesda Naval Hospital at the time of the alleged assault, are two Marine privates, Robert A. Allen, 21, and Jesse Wakefield, 24, and Aviation Boatswain's Mate 1/c Charles E. Boner, 24.

In his opening remarks to the all-male jury, Defense Counsel Walter Moorman said that in September Allen used a half-crutch to maneuver because his left leg was in a cast. He said that Boner's upper body and left arm were in a cast, and that Wakefield had recently broken his leg.

The 28-year-old governess, a slight brunette, was the first Government witness. Questioned by State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson, she said she had met Allen at a Bethesda tavern on the night of September 12. She said she agreed to let him take her home, but when she got in the car found the two others already there.

Despite protests, she said, they took her to a field near the intersection of the Rockville Pike and Garrett Park rd., and "attacked" her. She testified that when she complained that she might become pregnant Wakefield said "Don't worry, you won't live to get back to Bethesda."

Testifying for the defense, a filling station attendant said that the driver had stopped for gas shortly before the time of the alleged rape and that the woman had not protested. A court reporter read notes from the preliminary hearing when the governess testified that the car had not stopped between the tavern and the scene.

Court Postpones Bartender's Case At Hyattsville

The case of James Comber, 31, of the 5700 block of 42d st., Hyattsville, was continued until February 6 yesterday in police court at Hyattsville.

Comber, a bartender, was acquitted recently in Philadelphia on a murder charge. The presiding judge termed the verdict "a miscarriage of justice" and ordered lesser charges of assault and battery pressed against Comber.

Comber surrendered to Maryland authorities and announced he would fight extradition.

Fired at Girl

Mental Test Ordered for Gun-Wielder

Edward F. Schwenk, 21, of 2415 E st. nw., a telephone company clerk, yesterday was committed to Gallinger for mental tests following his arrest Sunday after he fired a shot at a girl in a skating rink.

The girl was listed by police as Muriel Rowley, 17, of 510 Jefferson st. nw., a student at Coolidge High School. She said she and Schwenk had been engaged but broke off about a month ago.

Police quoted Schwenk as saying he intended to kill the girl. After firing the gun he hid in the girl's home, where police, who escorted her home from the rink, found him.

Original charges against Schwenk of housebreaking, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon were reduced in Municipal Court yesterday to illegal entry and making threats in a menacing manner.

This was done to allow commitment to Gallinger—a move that would have been forestalled by more serious charges. The case was continued for 30 days pending the tests.

in 1944, less than a year after the youngest child was born.

Mrs. Kearney has still to take the stand, but in affidavits charges that Kearney relied on her earnings to make ends meet. She said he insisted that she work while pregnant and return to her position soon after the children were born. She is a $3225-a-year interviewer with the Federal Security Agency.

Kearney, under cross-examination, admitted spending between December 25, 1948, and January 7, 1949, in his wife's apartment, but denied that they lived together as man and wife during this interval.

He said his primary purpose was to keep Mrs. Kearney from "ruining the children's Christmas holiday."

Mrs. Kearney, in her affidavits, said that on one occasion in 1943, Kearney ordered her and the son, Michael, then 3, to take a drive in the country with her on a cold, snowy night. There, he ordered her to get out of the car with the boy, she declared.

Luckily, she said, a passerby in a car gave them a lift into the city.

Mrs. Kearney, a sandy-haired serious woman in court, denied that she abandoned her husband and infant children for her career. She said she was too beaten down by her husband's action to try to get them back until this year.

But, she declared, she often saw them from a distance at the Silver Spring home where they now reside with a family.

"I cried within myself but contented myself with the sheer pleasure of just being able to look at my children," she stated in the affidavits.

Lately, she stated, she visits the children regularly under a court order permitting it.

Psychiatric Evidence On Chambers Hinted

New York, Dec. 19 (NYHT).—Alger Hiss took the witness stand in his own defense for the second time today and again denied that he ever gave secret Government documents to Whittaker Chambers or any other unauthorized person.

He is on trial on a perjury indictment which alleges that this denial is false, and that he did give such documents to Chambers in February and March, 1938.

Hiss testified today that he had never heard any suggestion that he had violated the "trust and confidence" reposed in him in performing various official duties that highlighted his career. These included his work as executive secretary of the Dumbarton Oaks Conference of 1944, member of the United States delegation to the Yalta Conference in February, 1945, and secretary general of the United Nations Conference at San Francisco from April 25 to June 26, 1945.

Explains Work

In each of these posts, he said, his work involved, among other things, guaranteeing the security of persons and documents.

Hiss was preceded today by Malcolm Cowley, author and literary critic, who testified that in 1940 Chambers told him that former Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre was 'the head of a Communist apparatus in the State Department." Cowley said he did not recall any mention of Hiss in his conversation with Chambers, but it might be that the name was mentioned and he forgot it.

"Psychiatric Testimony"

Defense Counsel Claude B. Cross, who has previously indicated that he intends to produce "phychiatric testimony" about the mental condition of Chambers, said the testimony of Cowley was important in this connection. Chambers is the only witness who has accused Hiss of giving him State Department papers. All the other prosecution witnesses have corroborated other details in Chambers' story.

Mrs. Margaret Kellogg Smith, who said she and her husband ran a camp for children near Chestertown, Md., from 1933 to 1939, testified that Hiss was at the camp every day during the first two weeks of August, 1937.

This is the period during which Chambers says he took a trip to Peterborough, N. H., with Hiss and his wife.

Mrs. Olivia Fountain Tesone of 2809 O st. nw., Washington, testified that she had never seen Chambers. Chambers had said he was introduced to her by Hiss or his wife in a Washington restaurant.

Hiss acknowledged that four memoranda in the case are in his handwriting, but said he did not give them to Chambers or any other unauthorized persons. He made the same statement about the 65 pages of typewritten matter.

He said the papers were not typed in his house nor by Mrs. Hiss. "I have no idea where or how they were typed," he added.

Cross then put in evidence—apparently to show that Hiss did not follow the Communist Party line in 1939—a legal memorandum he wrote on September 26, 1939, a month after the Nazi-Soviet pact.

The memorandum argued that there was nothing in international law to prevent the United States from aiding the Allies against the Nazis in the European war. Hiss said he wrote the memorandum as an answer to a letter signed by Professors Charles Cheney Hyde and Philip C. Jessup of Columbia University, arguing that the United States could not legally aid the Allies.

Members of Milwit's committee are Joseph Smith, Costello Post 15 vice chairman; George Burkett, Building and Trades Post 54; William Clay, Second Division Post, and James Lomack, James C. Walker Post 26.

The drive will end sometime after January 1, the Legion said.

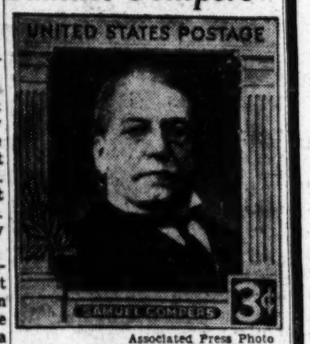

Home for Aged To Have Catholic Party Wednesday

The annual Christmas party under Catholic auspices for inmates of the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains will be held at home Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m.

There will be movie shorts, Christmas carols and skits by the Catholic University Players.

Santa Claus will distribute packages to the 480 residents. The men will receive tobacco, complete outfit of clothes and shaving sets. The women will receive costume jewelry, clothes and cosmetics. The Right Rev. Msgr. John J. Russell, archdiocesan director of Catholic charities, will help distribute gifts.

Bridges' Name In NKVD Files, Crouch Thinks

San Francisco, Dec. 19 (AP).—A former Communist today testified the proof of his charge that Harry Bridges held high office in the Communist Party is to be found in Moscow

No list of the party's exclusive central committee in the United States for 1938 is available in this country, Paul Crouch, Florida newspaperman, testified at the perjury trial of Bridges, West Coast longshore leader.

Then where is such a list, pressed defense attorney Vincent Hallinan.

"I have no doubt," said Crouch, an admitted former Communist and party district organizer, "that the list reached Moscow within 30 days of the election and today they are in the files of the NKVD."

Crouch, who identified himself today as on leave in a "supervisory capacity" from the Miami Daily News, was bombarded with questions intended by the defense to prove the testified affiliation of Bridges with the central committee was entirely hearsay evidence.

Under such questioning, Crouch said:

A thousand persons broke into wild cheering when Bridges' alleged membership on the committee was announced at a secret meeting in New York City in 1938.

Communist officials were warned as early as 1937 that there was too much free talk about the identity of Comrade Rossi, allegedly Bridges, and they were to be more careful.

High Court Upholds Tax on Auto Clubs

By Chalmers Roberts
Post Reporter

The American Automobile Association, its Washington club and similar groups all over the country probably will have to start paying income taxes as a result of a Supreme Court ruling yesterday.

The court, in effect, upheld the Bureau of Internal Revenue's contention that the good old days when daring automobilists doffed their linen dusters to gather together for a social evening are gone forever. Instead, the Government contends, the auto clubs have become strictly service organizations and not clubs at all, as far as tax-exempt privileges are concerned.

The AAA has 2,800,000 members in the 48 States and some 52,000 in the metropolitan Washington area.

The Court of Appeals in San Francisco had upheld the Government in canceling the California club's long-time exemption, and the Supreme Court yesterday refused to hear the club's appeal. Two similar cases involving the AAA affiliate in Chattanooga, Tenn., and the rival Keystone Auto Club also were decided in the Government's favor last summer by the United States Tax Court.

The Government contended in the California case that the club "is a service association organized and operated to render services to its members for a fee and to obtain such other objectives as the betterment of highway construction and the promotion of safe driving."

It was pointed out club members, for their membership fee ($12 in California, $15 here) receive tow service, emergency road service and certain auto insurance and bail bond service.

AAA officials said last night they could not estimate the effect on the organization's finances. They pointed out the AAA operates on a budget of nearly $4,500,000 and that in past years profits had been used to extend services or cut down fees to members in succeeding years.

In other actions yesterday, the Supreme Court:

1. Agreed to consider the constitutionality of a Washington State law limiting picketing. In dispute is a ban against picketing of businesses where there is no labor dispute.

The court accepted three cases on the dispute, two of them involving auto dealers and the third an inn. All involve AFL unions. The auto firms were picketed for refusing to close down at 6 p. m. as did their competitors, and the inn in a "we-do-not-patronize" campaign after failure to organize the establishment.

2. Refused to rule in the case of a one-time Army civilian employe arrested in the United States by the Army for return to Germany for court-martial for improper use of cigarette coupons. The man had sought release by the Army.

3. Ruled, 6 to 2, that the Government does not have to pay freight charges on a lumber cargo that was lost in a wartime torpedoing. Alcoa Steamship Co., Inc., had sought $3520 but the court ruled it was not entitled to payment because the cargo was never delivered.

4. Ordered, 6 to 2, further lower court proceedings in a damage suit against the Atlanta & Saint Andrews Bay Railway Co. by a workman injured in a switching accident. The high court held the trial judge's charge to the jury violated the Federal Safety Appliance Act.

The court then recessed for three weeks until January 9.

Dogs Hearts 'Suspended' By Freezing

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The use of frozen sleep to stop dogs' hearts long enough for surgical repairs otherwise impossible was disclosed today in a report from the University of Toronto.

As a result a promising new step in mending bad human hearts is foreseen.

Frozen sleep is unconsciousness that comes when the temperature of the entire body is dropped a little below 90 Fahrenheit. Human beings have been kept unconscious for days in this way with no bad effects.

For surgery on hearts briefer unconsciousness is enough. This chilling slows down all reactions. The heart beats more slowly. But, more important, the need for rapid supply of oxygen drops and a slower rate keeps a person alive.

The dog experiments were done at the University of Toronto by a team headed by Dr. W. G. Bigelow. Their work is soon to be published in a medical journal. Meanwhile the brief university letter gives the highlights.

Ordinarily dogs with their hearts stopped die in three to five minutes. This is about the same time as in humans.

Exactly how much extra time frozen sleep gives was not stated, but the report said it was "much longer."

When the Canadian dogs were completely unconscious from cold, their chests were opened. The blood vessels leading to the heart were clamped, and the sac surrounding the heart opened.

Next the hearts were opened and surgical repairs made inside. The living pump was sewn up, the beat resumed and the dogs recovered.

Mill Firm Sues Department Store Here for $250,000

Burlington Mills Corp. yesterday filed a suit in District Court against Lansburgh & Bros., asking $250,000 damages from the department store.

Burlington claimed that Lansburgh's advertised some goods as Burlington fabrics when "all, a substantial part or some of the fabrics offered for sale and sold" were not made by the Burlington Corp.

Ralph L. Goldsmith, vice president and general manager of the Lansburgh store, said he had no comment to make on the suit "because the first I heard about it was when you and a trade paper called to ask for comment."

Glenn Dale Party

A Christmas party for tubercular patients at Glenn Dale Sanitarium will be held at 6:30 p. m. today under the auspices of the Southwest Harbor Lions Club. S. A. Freas is chairman of the arrangements committee.

Former Federal Judge Charles I. Dawson of Kentucky yesterday asked the Federal District Court to force John L. Lewis to recognize him as operators' trustee of the United Mine Workers welfare and retirement fund. He charged Lewis with "squandering" the fund.

Dawson

Dawson was named by the operators to succeed Ezra Van Horn when the latter resigned as operator trustee, but Lewis has balked all attempts to seat him on the three-man board.

In his suit Dawson named both Lewis and Senator H. Styles Bridges, neutral trustee, as defendants. But he made it clear in a statement that he named Bridges only because he was a necessary part of the legal proceedings.

In fact, he said, Bridges has "consistently insisted that I should be recognized as a successor trustee to Mr. Van Horn."

At recent trustee meetings, Bridges has brought up the question of Dawson's seating. Lewis has been quoted as telling Bridges: "All right, you vote for seating, I'll vote against it and Judge Dawson has no vote."

Dawson said he regretted the necessity of the suit. "but I am not in the habit of tamely submitting to any willful invasion or disregard of what I regard as my legal rights and I do not intend to make any exception in favor of John L. Lewis.

"I am going to let the courts of the land, instead of Mr. Lewis, determine whether the operators who have paid all the money into the welfare fund, and which Mr. Lewis has so shamefully squandered, shall henceforth be represented in its administration by a trustee of their selection."

The issue, he added, is whether Lewis "shall be left free and uncontrolled in his haphazard and profligate spending of the fund."

Coal operators pay 20 cents into the fund for each ton of coal mined.

In his suit, Dawson asked that Lewis be enjoined from spending any of the money, transferring any of it, or calling any meeting. He also asked that Lewis be made to pay the costs of his suit.

After refusing to recognize Dawson, Lewis named his own choice for operator trustee—President Howard W. Showalter of the Monongahela Rail & River Coal Co., Fairmont, W. Va. Showalter has been named trustee in all the contracts which Lewis has signed with a small group of soft coal operators in the current wage dispute.

It is one of the factors that has encouraged big operators to resist Lewis' new contract demands.

Stock Clerk Is Given 360 Days on 2 Counts

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson yesterday sentenced a department store stock clerk to 180 days for carrying a concealed weapon, and another 180 days, or $400 fine, for assaulting two women.

William Morehouse, 3335 Brothers pl. se., pleaded guilty November 28.

REA Lends $55 Million To 10 Co-ops

By The Associated Press

The Rural Electrification Administration yesterday said it has authorized loans of nearly 55 million dollars to 10 borrowers in the last last 90 days for the formation of superpower cooperatives.

These cooperatives are combinations of a number of small co-ops. They are formed for the purpose of building their own generating plants. Before, most had their own transmission lines but bought power from private companies.

These federations have obtained more than 50 percent of all REA loans this year, the agency's records show. Until just after the war, such loans accounted for only 10 percent of REA's total.

"There are several reasons for this trend toward large federated systems," explained Clyde Ellis, executive manager, National Rural Electric Cooperative Association. He listed them as:

1. Inability of the individual co-op to obtain all the power it needs from private utilities.
2. Rates which the co-ops regard as excessive.
3. Restrictions on the use of power presently available.

There are now 23 federated systems in the country which Ellis said represent the bulk of the cooperative capacity.

"A continuted expansion of this program is a likely prospect for the future," he said.

School Board Protests Beer License Bid

A Board of Education protest against issuance of a beer and wine license for a restaurant at 1345 Webster st. nw. has been received by the Alcoholic Beverage Board, which yesterday held a continued hearing on the license request.

The restaurant is about 712 feet from the nearest door of the Burdick Vocational High School, about 1700 feet from the Roosevelt High School and about 1900 feet from Macfarland Junior High School, according to testimony yesterday.

Charles T. Fletcher, the restaurant owner and petitioner, told the board only 33 school children used his restaurant during the week December 9 through 15. The three schools have an enrollment totaling 1968 students, according to testimony by the school principals.

He also told the board all three schools have cafeterias and Macfarland students must obtain special permission to eat lunch outside. He said he did not cater to the students.

The Board of Education protest said the restaurant is visited by many students from Burdick, and Roosevelt at lunch times, and students from all three schools outside of school hours.

Case Against Lecturers on Health Voided

The United States Attorney's office yesterday dropped charges of violating the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act lodged against two health lecturers here.

The lecturers, Maxine C. Fewer and her husband Edward, were arrested March 17, 1947, while speaking at the Annapolis Hotel.

Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson said he nol prossed the case because the Fewers are no longer active and because a civil injunction action, brought in Scranton, Pa., is pending. He said also that there was a question of court jurisdiction at issue.

The Fewers were represented by attorney Horace J. Donnelly, jr.

Bad Hombres Rustle Steers With a Truck

If you tuned in late to the police radio yesterday afternoon you might have heard the following:

"They have white faces. Five have the hair cut short on the end of the tail. Some, it is believed, have a 'V' cut out of the left ear."

Police were talking about 11 Hereford steers rustled late Sunday from Al Embrey's farm 16 miles east of Fredericksburg, in King George County.

About the time the steers disappeared, the foreman saw some men in a green truck with what looked like District tags. So Washington police were asked to help round up the rustlers.

Embrey, a former judge of Fredericksburg Corporation Court, said the 11 missing steers are worth $2200.

At last report, the steers, with or without a "V" cut out of their left ears, had not been seen on Washington streets.

Citizens' Unit Called Top School News

Creation of the National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools has been called the most important educational event of 1949.

The selection was made through the Educational Press Association and announced here yesterday by B. P. Brodinsky, editor of the Educator's Washington Dispatch.

The commission, financed by the Carnegie Corp. and the General Education Board, of the Rockefeller Foundation, is headed by Roy E. Larsen, president of Time Inc. It was formed last May to meet the crisis in public education through community action.

"The launching of this commission of laymen," said Brodinsky, "tops a series of events reflecting the growing interest of citizens in the public schools. The number of local citizens' advisory committees is growing rapidly in all parts of the country."

Arkansas Gazette Publishes Despite Strike by Guild

Little Rock, Dec. 19 (AP)—Circulation workers joined editorial employes in a strike at the Arkansas Gazette today but the newspaper continued to be published and distributed.

In joining the walkout, circulation workers who are members of the American Newspapers Guild (CIO) disrupted distribution of the paper's Monday edition in greater Little Rock.

5 Pct. Higher Budget Okayed In Greenbelt

The Greenbelt, Md., city council last night approved a 1950 budget of $225,683, an increase of about 5 percent over the current budget of $213,611.

Charles T. McDonald, city manager, said most of the increase is in administrative expense caused by the addition of personnel. Largest budget item is $59,611 for recreation.

The new budget would hike the tax rate from $3.11 to $3.25 per $100 assessed valuation. It will be presented to the Public Housing Administration for approval. That body will be called upon to supply $182,634 of the proposed expenditures.

Last year, PHA cut approximately $8000 from the council's budget. Other funds come from taxes and other revenue sources.

Ramspeck Named Public Relations Group President

Robert Ramspeck, executive vice president of the Air Transport Association, yesterday was elected president of the National Capital Forge of the American Public Relations Association.

The forge also elected John T. O'Brien, information director of the Office of the Housing Expediter, as vice president.

The new secretary is Mrs. Ethel Slater, public relations director for Gude Bros. Allen Wagner, public relations director of the American Road Builders Association, was elected treasurer.

Ramspeck succeeds Edwin N. Lewis, director of public relations for the Community Chest Federation, who becomes a member of the Board of Directors.

Closed Road In Use, Dozen Witnesses Say

A dozen witnesses testified before Judge Charles C. Marbury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday that a road barricaded last May by the Bowie Race Track interests has been in public use since 1908 at least.

They asked the court at Upper Marlboro, Md., to order the track operators, the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association, to reopen the road and reconstruct a bridge torn down at the same time the road was closed.

The plaintiffs said between 25 and 30 families on the Anne Arundel County side of the Patuxent River used the road and bridge to travel to Bowie, Md. Part of the road goes through the race track grounds.

The track operators, however, maintained the bridge was unsafe.

N. Virginians Tell Delegate Their Needs

Fairfax County and Falls Church residents last night made the most of a chance to sound off on their legislative needs.

At a meeting at Fairfax County Courthouse, called by Edwin Lynch, who represents the two jurisdictions in the Virginia House of Delegates, they called in general for better schools, more health and welfare facilities and a solution to State and local tax problems.

Dr. John R. Miles, member of the Falls Church School Board, asked that some type of basic guaranteed salary be set up for Virginia teachers. He said other States "are coming in and proselyting our teachers."

F. W. Robinson, Fairfax County school board chairman, spoke of the much-discussed sales tax for Virginia. "If you feel like a sales tax is necessary," he told Lynch and the audience, "and if you can get it earmarked for schools, the Lord be with you."

Fairfax County's "grave problem" arising from overcrowded court dockets was outlined by Thomas P. Chapman, jr., clerk of the Circuit Court.

Chapman said the bar associations of Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William counties and the city of Alexandria are considering a request for legislation to provide for another court of record for Fairfax.

In Richmond, he said, there are six courts of record for some 240,000 persons. Judge Paul Brown of Fairfax and Prince William counties has about 135,000 persons in his circuit.

Chapman also noted that the county Trial Justice Court probably ranks at the top of the State in the number of cases it handles.

From the School Emergency Association, came a four-point legislative program, proposing that the General Assembly:

1. Increase its "average daily attendance" grant for schools to $100 per pupil.
2. Place 30 million dollars in the State literary fund, now depleted.
3. Appropriate 20 million dollars to cover the next two years on an average-daily-attendance basis for school construction to counties and cities eligible for aid under the minimum education program fund.
4. Appropriate 20 million dollars to cover the next two years on an "ADA" basis to counties and cities having 40 to 50 percent increases in enrollments since the school year of 1943-44.

Health and welfare legislative needs were described by Mrs. Ann Wilkins, president of the Lay-Health Association, and Miss T. Mary Beacham, county superintendent of public welfare.

They called for expansion in hospital construction, facilities for treatment of mental patients, adequate matching by the State of local welfare funds and increased services for tubercular and cancer patients.

Transit Wages

Capital Transit employes have a very good thing in the 10-cent-an-hour wage boost awarded by the arbitration board. Whether the public has come out equally well is a horse of a different color. At the outset it looks very much as if the arbitration board either had predicated its decision on an anticipated increase in transit fares or had ignored entirely the possible necessity for such a move.

When Capital Transit began singing the song of higher fares during the arbitration hearings—no doubt to influence the board—this newspaper criticized the reliance on nicking the public further as a way out of the company's revenue dilemma. Assuredly higher fares, if they are granted, will cut further into the company's already declining patronage. But if the company has responsibility for preserving a stable rate structure, so has the union—and the arbitration board. In this case it is the public that must lay the golden eggs.

To be sure, the wage award does not in the least relieve Capital Transit of the responsibility of instituting rigid economies and using more ingenuity in promoting traffic. But during the 12 months ending November 30, the company earned only about 2½ percent on its rate base. For 11 months of this year net income was $647,000. The retroactive feature alone in the wage increase will require some $500,000, and the total cost of the benefits granted the union is estimated at $1,100,000 annually. If the arbitration board discovered some untapped sources of revenue by which the increases could be paid, it has not disclosed them.

Capital Transit agreed to arbitration last July in order to avert a strike. We believe the decision was in the public interest. Yet the company asserts that in all cities where there have been strikes, unions have settled for increases of 4 cents or less. Only two companies in the country—both under municipal ownership—are paying higher wages than those in the present settlement. The upshot of this award may be to convince the company that strikes are the most economical way to settle disputes. That would indeed be an unfortunate development for the community.

We do not pretend to know how much wage increase was justified. This is a matter which cannot be considered in the abstract. Even if the arbitration board was restricted to consideration of the issues in the dispute alone certainly the company's ability to pay—within the present rate structure—is a factor of basic importance. For, unlike strictly private businesses, Capital Transit has a limit on what it can charge—a limit fixed in the public interest. And it is fallacious to think that the cost of wage increases can merely be shifted to transit patrons without damaging the enterprise.

Slander By Television

Since September 12, 1948, when she called William Remington a Communist on a television broadcast, Elizabeth Bentley has made no attempt to defend the merit of her accusation. She had ample opportunity to do so when Mr. Remington's fitness for Government employment was under consideration by the Loyalty Review Board, which completely cleared him. The board gave her three distinct invitations to appear before it, and she failed to do so. When Mr. Remington filed a suit for defamation against her and against the General Foods Corp., sponsor of the program on which she appeared, and the NBC television network, a defense on the merits, if any, would have been in order. Instead, the defendants chose to pursue purely dilatory tactics by seeking dismissal of the suit on technical legal grounds.

Their motion to dismiss has now been denied by Federal District Judge Conger. He ruled, for the first time, so far as we can determine, that defamation extemporaneously expressed via the television medium must be treated as slander rather than as libel. The distinction is important. Generally, slander is actionable without a showing of special damage only if the publication of it imputes a crime, a loathsome disease, or some conduct, condition or trait tending to injure another in his trade or profession. A printed allegation that a person is a Communist has been held to be libelous per se—that is actionable without proof that it was injurious to the particular person. But the permanence of the printed word is supposed to give it greater effectiveness than the spoken word. Therefore the same allegation made orally would be actionable, under ordinary circumstances, only upon a showing that it injured the defamed person in his trade or profession.

The defendants in this suit sought to have it dismissed on the ground that it was slander, not libel, and that Mr. Remington had failed to plead special damages. Judge Conger agreed that Miss Bentley's statements should be deemed slanderous but ruled that, because they were uttered in reference to a Government employe, they constituted slander per se and that, therefore, no allegation of special damage was needed. The logic of this seems to us unassailable. "I know of no accusation more discreditive of a United States Government official with respect to the proper conduct of his office than that he is a Communist," the judge observed. "Members of the Communist Party are not permitted to hold office in the Federal Government. Generally, Communists are looked upon as representatives of a foreign government."

Mao In Moscow

With Mao Tse-tung in Moscow presumably celebrating his completed conquest of China, it is easy to jump to the conclusion that the masters of Russia and China are about to join hands for the spread of communism through the remainder of Asia and perhaps the world. The West must be prepared for the signing of a treaty of friendship and alliance between Stalin and Mao. Apparently it suits the purpose of both these leaders to create the impression of solidarity in their interests and aims. But the factors that will control the relations between Russia and China are far removed from the honeymoon atmosphere in which Mao is said to have been received in Moscow.

For the sake of perspective it may be well to recall that Marshal Tito was received in Moscow as a conquering hero in the Communist cause in April, 1945. At the conclusion of his visit Tito and Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov signed a 20-year treaty of military alliance and friendship in the presence of Premier Stalin. It was a gala event in the Russian capital celebrated by a dinner in the official dining hall of the Kremlin and widely advertised as cementing the spiritual union of Slavdom. The treaty turned out to be a scrap of paper because the Kremlin was really looking to Tito for loyalty to Russia and unquestioned acceptance of foreign and domestic policies made in Moscow.

Will Stalin be any wiser in dealing with Mao Tse-tung? It is always possible, of course, that the Kremlin will learn from its own mistakes. But the very nature of the system, as it has operated the world over, is to require blind conformity to Kremlin policy regardless of what turn it may take. In the case of Yugoslavia, with its large Slavic population, the outlook for a harmonious working relationship with the Soviet Union was much better four years ago than is the outlook for Chinese-Russian harmony in the years ahead. But Tito is now the target of the most violent abuse that comes out of the Moscow propaganda machine.

In the case of China, as we have often pointed out, a deep-seated antiforeignism is an integral part of the movement that has swept over the country. Apparently the "Chinese People's Democratic Republic" expects to develop a policy of autarchy, ousting all foreign commercial and industrial activities in China. The Communists seem to envisage a self-supporting China. It is not reasonable to suppose that such a regime will long be indifferent to Russian control of Manchuria. The fact is that the Soviet Union is encroaching upon Chinese rights and interests there more seriously than any other power.

Mao is likely to tolerate the Russian privileges in China so long as that policy seems useful to him. But the history of China very strongly suggests that a collision of interests will give an ironic twist to the current celebrations in Moscow when the Chinese discover what it means to deal with the Kremlin and when they feel strong enough to stand on their own feet. We suspect that Mao's social revolution has succeeded in China because the people hoped that a change of masters might lighten their burden and weaken the grip of imperialism on China. Can Soviet imperialism, with its purges and its cruel repression, be imposed on the people who have finally driven out the Kuomintang corruptionists?

State Department officials are merely being realistic when they discount the holiday atmosphere surrounding the Moscow talks. It is a pity that they are not equally realistic in disregarding the phony blockade of Chinese ports by the now defunct Chinese Nationalist government.

Uruguay And Brazil

After the unfortunate misunderstanding with Uruguay last summer over Army meat purchases, the new treaty of commerce recently concluded between Uruguay and the United States is an especially happy event. Not only does it cement commercial ties with a wide range of protection for persons and property, it also guarantees equitable treatment for American investments. In other words, the fact that such an agreement is now on paper opens an avenue for consultation between the two governments in the event of dispute. Guarantees respecting the treatment of private capital are essential if the Point Four program is to have maximum application, and in this sense the treaty with Uruguay is a model of what the State Department would like to obtain elsewhere. Especially is this true in Latin America, where taxation and investment regulations vary widely.

Concurrently with the Uruguayan treaty, the International Monetary Fund has permitted Brazil to withdraw 22½ million dollars from the capital it had subscribed. This move has been widely heralded in Brazil as a vote of confidence in the Brazilian government's policy of a balanced budget. The claim is not unjustified; Brazil merits praise and support for the manner in which it has met inflation and other postwar economic dislocations. The fund withdrawal, which amounts to a short-term loan, will enable Brazil to place on a current basis its payments on debts contracted with the United States. In the words of the Brazilian director on the Monetary Fund, the loan "should mark the beginning of a favorable phase for the investment of foreign capital." Brazil, however, is still demurring over the American effort to obtain specific guarantees on private capital. A great deal of the reluctance of foreign investors would disappear if Brazil were to follow Uruguay's example and agree to a treaty.

Hope For The Belasco

The fact that concrete terms and proposals for operation of the Belasco Theater are now being discussed by the General Services Administration and the American National Theater and Academy is immensely hopeful. It is still a good deal too early, as this newspaper's drama critic, Richard L. Coe, has prudently pointed out, to be planning theater parties for next spring. But the possibility that Washingtonians will again be able within a matter of months to attend professional stage productions is now a real one—well beyond the realm of mere wishful speculation.

ANTA has submitted to General Services Administrator Jess Larson a specific and practical bid for leasing the Belasco. And Mr. Larson has responded to it with an acceptance in principle, quite properly insisting, however, that the Government be reimbursed for all expenses entailed in moving and maintaining the Treasury Department facilities now housed in the Belasco building. The magnitude of these expenses has still to be determined; and this may present a serious difficulty. The important thing, however, is that a real desire to come to terms is apparent on the part of the Government and the theater group alike.

It is scarcely to be questioned that the Belasco can be operated profitably if leased on the reasonable basis now under consideration. Washingtonians—and there are a good many more of them now than there were when the National was in its heyday—are hungry for dramatic entertainment. They will support high-caliber theatrical offerings for protracted runs. And experience at the Meridian Hill and Olney Theaters has demonstrated that the absence of any racial discrimination will promote rather than inhibit attendance.

Although cheering is not yet in order, it seems to us that a good deal of gratitude is due Senators Flanders and Douglas whose good will and good sense were so largely responsible for pointing the way to a practicable arrangement for utilizing the Belasco. And the GSA administrator deserves the warmest commendation for his cooperative and enlightened approach to the problem. As Dr. Frederick E. Ressig, president of the Interchurch Fellowship of Washington, observed in congratulating Mr. Larson, the absence of a legitimate theater in Washington and "the reason why it is absent" have long been a "blot on the city's name and reputation."

Larger Supreme Court?

Talk of enlarging the Supreme Court is said to be "kicking around Washington again." According to a recent article in Business Week, the idea this time is not to pack the court but to give it two new judges to relieve the present judges of the heavy burden they are carrying. To keep the issue out of politics, it is said that one of the appointees would be a Democrat and the other a Republican. The latter suggestion alone is enough to indicate that the talk is merely casual. The power to nominate members of the Supreme Court rests solely with the President, and no scheme that could be hatched on Capitol Hill or elsewhere could bind him to divide his nominations between the two major parties, regardless of how lopsided the court may be in point of the judges' political affiliations.

As to relieving the burden on the court, the deaths of Justices Murphy and Rutledge are sufficient to indicate that the high bench is overworked. But few persons close to the court are likely to urge enlargement of its membership in the interest of reducing the volume of work for each judge. It is a common error to assume that, because the number of judges functioning in the Federal district and appellate courts has been increased, the Supreme Court, too, should have its membership enlarged. The myth that additional judges on the Supreme Bench would mean increased efficiency should have been exploded forever by the late Chief Justice Hughes' letter to the Senate Judiciary Committee when the court-packing bill was under consideration. Instead of increasing the efficiency of the court, he said, more judges would impair it, so long as the court has to act as a unit. For "there would be more judges to hear, more judges to confer, more judges to discuss, more judges to be convinced and to decide."

The simple fact is that no court of last resort could possibly handle all the cases that would be submitted to it if the right of appeal were not restricted. Recognizing this fact, Congress as long ago as 1925 made it possible for the court to limit appeals through writs of certiorari "to important questions of general application." In other words, no case of this sort goes to the Supreme Court as of right but only because the court itself thinks it necessary to clarify the law. By the simple act of denying a larger number of petitions for review, the court can thus reduce its own work load. Some authorities believe that the court ought to concentrate its attention on fewer cases in any event. Certainly if the work load is overtaxing the energy of the judges this remedy is preferable to any attempt to enlarge its membership.

Scientists' Salaries

If taken seriously, recent press comments on Government employment could raise difficult moral questions for scientists. It is claimed that citizens are leaving responsible positions in the Government because "their families need the money." A reporter went so far as to assert that one man must resign a position paying $20,000 because his family won't eat roots. That is, the assertion goes, weighing the social needs of his family against the opportunities and rewards of public service, he has decided that it would be unfair for him to continue in Government.

Now what about scientists, few of whom receive more than 10 or 12 thousand? Are those who choose Government service in contrast to private business at five to ten times this salary poor fathers? Many scientists in Government—I don't know just how many—have made this choice. Perhaps scientists have trained themselves to have less expensive social interests than others. Or it may be appropriate to expect greater sacrifices from scientists than from others—although I don't quite see why. But are they really unfair to their families? If so, what would happen to all our great scientific services if such men accepted this concept of social values?

Or could it be that their families are adequately provided for after all; and that those who "cannot live" on salaries of 10 to 20 thousand have a concept of public service and its awards ill adapted to the requirements of modern Government?

Propaganda In Schools

The exclusion of the Soviet Embassy's Information Bulletin from local high school libraries brings to the fore again a disturbing question which was raised a couple of years ago by the spectacle of the Nation-wide frenzy precipitated when a naive young school teacher from Russia was invited to tell Western High School students about her girlhood in that country. The question is duplex:

1. Have we so little confidence in our vaunted "American way of life" that we are afraid it cannot stand comparison with customs and conditions in other lands? Are we subconsciously aware of serious weaknesses in our economic and social structure which we fear might make it unable to hold its own in free discussion?

2. Are our educational methods such that our young people have not learned to weigh evidence and draw sound conclusions? Must we maintain an iron curtain of our own around our boys and girls, lest they be led astray by some Pied Piper of Kremlin? At what age can American men and women be trusted to think for themselves? (Or can they?)

With virtually all channels of information and education in this country tightly controlled by the conservative business element, why are we so quickly panicked by the approach of ideas from Eastern Europe? Have they some mysterious power which we do not know how to combat? If we believe our way of life to be the best, we should welcome opportunities to set it up alongside other systems so as to bring out its excellences by comparison and contrast.

George V. Allen made a very wise remark the other day, when he said, "No dictatorship can exist without censorship and no democracy can exist with it."

Holy Places

The vote of the United Nations reveals plainly the factor which decided that organization to internationalize Jerusalem. Religion, and religion as it relates itself to the so-called "holy places," turned the tide toward internationalization. Does that factor justify the vote which the U. N. gave as representing the civilized world?

With my sympathy decidedly with internationalization for more substantial reasons, I can see how the influence which urged that vote is hardly tenable. The "holy places" in and about Jerusalem which can be authenticated are only two. One is the rock on which the Altar of Sacrifice of the Temple was built and which is now covered by the Dome of the Rock, often called the Mosque of Omar. This, of course, is under strict Moslem control. The other site or spot is Gethsemane, in the Valley of the Kedron, at the foot of Mount Olivet. To these two Christian "holy places" may be added the Wailing Wall of the Jews, where a section of the original wall of the city remains.

The Jerusalem of the days of Jesus of Nazareth is for the most part 40 feet below the present city. Archeology is delving into this question and will almost certainly unearth definite results of authentic sites eventually. But, without naming the now exploited "holy places," Jerusalem represents so much today that is commercialized and used as "show places," without more than tradition to back the reason for their claim, that intelligence is outraged by the stories told by officials who guard those places.

Aircraft Manufacturers

May I indulge in the luxury of a few comments concerning the eight companies Drew Pearson says control 75.1 percent of the aircraft industry? (Column published December 11.)

It is some years since the aging veteran, Curtiss-Wright, has manufactured a single airplane. Its subsidiary, Wright Aeronautical, which Pearson lists as a separate company, accounts for only a small part of the airframe business.

Glenn Martin has several loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, so that there is some question whether it has control of itself much less the industry.

Bendix, manufacturer of neither aircraft, engines nor propellers, must exercise its control over the industry through obscure channels which your columnist should reveal.

And conspicuous by its absence from his list is Boeing, which in 1948 had the largest backlog of any aircraft manufacturer and which invariably is in the first three.

Tribute to Berryman

My family thought Herbert Block's December 13 cartoon in memory of Clifford Berryman was wonderful.

It was an admirable tribute to a very great old cartoonist from a great young man. Mr. Block, like Mr. Berryman, astonishes us with his respect for the dignity of God and good man.

'The Big Wheel'

I must take exception to the remarks of Richard L. Coe, in his December 13 of the picture, The Big Wheel.

To call auto-racing the most obscure of all sports I challenge. When 101,000 people attend a stock car race as they did at Syracuse, N. Y., this September, could you call it obscure to the people of upper New York? Or the 100,000 that attended the sports car Grand Prix at Watkins Glen, not to mention the 175,000 that annually attend Indianapolis? Could this be justified by attendance figures which show auto-racing having drawn the fifth largest total of all sports?

And to question its right to the term sport is sacrilege. For some reason, known only to the American press, a sport must have a gambling angle to rate the moniker. True, auto racing has none, and what is more, no national scandal of fixed contests has ever graced its history. Sportsmen? To live with and associate with its individuals is to learn the true code of sportsmanship.

Mr. Coe can thank a race driver for his privilege every time he turns the key in his pleasure car. Because, every safety factor in the 1949 automobile was first tried, and developed, with a man risking his life, on the speedway.

Partisan Roadblock

After being an interested listener at the reorganization round-up of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, I am more than ever convinced that to obtain efficiency in our Government, something must be done to check the overemphasis on party in our democracy.

Repeated attempts have been made to make our Government more efficient, but little has come of it all, due largely to partisanship, in the final analysis. The splendid work of the Hoover Commission is the latest example, but all thinking citizens are again wondering just what and how much will be implemented by the necessary legislation, and how far it will get, even after the legislation is passed and enacted into law.

In the United States, increasing emphasis on the economic principle of democracy has reached a point where it ties in with the political principle of democracy until we see it being used as a means to obtain votes, thus aiding in keeping one party in power. So the great fault lies in the political principle.

Although parties seem to be of the very essence of democracy since the upward urge of democratic government in England in the seventeenth century, I am not convinced that democracy must fail if parties are laid aside. Surely this would be a lesser evil than some day to see our Government's credit fail, as it once did in our early history, and a panicky people moving in desperation to a foreign ism.

I would like very much to see the public polled on the following: "Lest the good which may be initiated by the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report be nullified, sooner or later, due to partisanship, should we have an amendment to the Constitution requiring that whenever the party in power fails to keep the budget balanced, party government shall automatically cease to exist and the Government shall function solely on the basis of merit and ability until the budget does balance? During the interim, candidates for elective offices shall be chosen equally from trained personnel and from private life and the word, 'merit' or 'ability,' substituted for the word 'party'."

Republicans And FEPC

By Marquis Childs

New Jersey Example

THE WAY in which Democrats and Republicans will square off in the political ring in 1950 is becoming fairly clear. The Democrats seem to have determined the nature of the sparring in the first round.

They have done this by a move that, whatever its inherent virtue, is extremely shrewd strategy. Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas had said that one of the first measures to be pushed will be the most touchy of all the civil rights proposals—a Fair Employment Practices Law.

At first glance this would seem to be a foolish beginning. For it will certainly touch off a Southern rebellion, complete with filibuster, that is bound to get in the way of the Administration program. But from the Democratic point of view it does some other things.

It puts the Republicans in the Senate on the spot. Are they for civil rights or are they not? What's more, this takes place against the background of Honest John Bricker's appeal for a union between the Republicans and the Southern Democrats.

The latter circumstance has a lot of Republicans worried. Their fondest wish for the New Year is that Senator Bricker and his pronouncement could be consigned to the outer reaches of oblivion.

Another complication is the fact, very much in the minds of Negroes and other minority groups, that in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress Republicans joined with Dixiecrats to put through a new rule making it more difficult to bring civil rights bills to a vote. The rule makes it nearly impossible to end debate.

ALL THIS takes on poignant meaning for at least a few Republicans who believe that in order to win a national victory their party must get back the Negro vote. As one proof, they are pointing to the outcome of New Jersey's November election, when Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll was reelected and the Hague machine overwhelmed.

In a revealing analysis, Arthur Sylvester in the Newark Evening News has shown how significant were Driscoll's heavy majorities in districts largely populated by Negroes. Thus in Montclair, where there are 11,000 Negroes, Driscoll in some Negro districts ran ahead by three to one and in others by four to one.

The Third Ward in Newark hadn't gone Republican since 1928. Driscoll carried every district in that ward. While Driscoll lost the county dominated by rigidly bossed Atlantic City, Negro leaders asserted their independence and he won in most districts in which the Negro population is in the majority.

The Governor sponsored and worked for the strong civil rights provisions in New Jersey's constitution. Fair employment practice provisions have been enforced more earnestly than in most States having such laws. Those who have studied the returns believe this is the explanation for the Negro vote. While President Truman in November of 1948 failed by a fairly small margin to carry the State, he got majorities of 2 to 1 or more in Negro districts.

THE REPUBLICANS who met out in Chicago last week and decided that the GOP must turn to the right (where have they been all this time?), should look at another and related phase of New Jersey's election. Old Guard Republicanism of the variety that seems to have run the Chicago show, would have been happy to see Driscoll done in. There is even a horrible suspicion that the Old Guard in New Jersey didn't do all it might have done in Driscoll's behalf.

That was because the New Jersey Governor decided he would not be handicapped by old guardism. He personally intervened to prevent former Senator Albert W. Hawkes from running for a second term in 1948. Hawkes is the beau ideal of the Old Guard, the apostle of enterprise so free that even Adam Smith, if he were alive, might think the theory of the free market was being pushed a little hard.

Those who want to know what to do about the Republican Party in its decrepitude could do no worse than have a talk with Governor Driscoll. At 48 he is a practical and successful politician who seems to know that, like it or not, this is the middle of the twentieth century and not the end of the nineteenth.

Scriptural-sounding injunctions to turn to the right may please the party's big money contributors, and the GOP till has an empty ring these days. But as a guide for action it is a little risky. A bit more to the right and the party may find itself right off the map.

Rescuing Animals

We desire to publicly express our appreciation to the Yellow and Bell Taxicab companies of this city for their prompt and wholehearted response to the appeal of the Washington Animal Rescue League for aid to animals injured or stricken on our city streets. Both of these companies have directed their cab drivers in cases of this kind to pick up and convey such animals to the nearest veterinarian, animal clinic, or shelter at the expense of the company. Let us hope the other cab companies will see fit to adopt a similar policy.

Today And Tomorrow

The Ideological Conflict In Asia

LONDON.—The terms of the conflict with the Soviet revolution are radically different in Europe and in Asia. One becomes aware of a difference traveling from Rome through Athens to Istanbul and Ankara. The Italian, the Greek, and the Turkish governments are all sharply aligned. Nevertheless the spirit and character of their resistance are obviously not the same.

Lippmann

At first I felt the difference without being able to define it for myself. But after a while I rediscovered what many have said before: that communism in the Lenin-Stalin form is far less revolutionary and alien in Asia than it is in Europe and in the countries which take their religion and philosophy and culture, their institutions and their fundamental laws, from the ancient Mediterranean civilization.

AMONG them the Cominform is an alien force attempting to impose its will upon people habituated to a differet way of life. As against Soviet communism most Europeans, even a growing number of European Communists, are essentially conservatives, defenders, that is to say, of some part of the institutions and principles of Western Christendom.

For that reason, though there were brief Communist insurrections after the First World War, the Soviet system has never been established in any European country except where the Russian army was able to crush the national resistance—or where, as in Czechoslovakia, the national leaders believed that the Russian army would crush them if they resisted. Thus the defense of Europe against communism has been primarily a military problem: that of interdicting the advance of the Red army. And by the same token the restoration of Europe depends primarily upon the withdrawal of the Red army.

BUT IN Asia the resistance to communism does not spring from the instincts and tradition of the masses. It is led by a Westernized elite and it is rooted in the class and the caste structure of the ancient societies of Asia. The resistance of the masses is not to be counted upon except when Communists appear as the advanced agents of a new wave of conquering peoples—specifically as Russians who would for the eighth or ninth time try to become masters of Turkey, or as Chinese who would conquer and exploit Southeast Asia. It is Russian or Chinese imperialism and not the Communist ideology and practice, which can arouse popular resistance.

For the masses of Asia have known little or nothing of freedom, or of the gospel of the equality of human persons, much less of democracy and representative government and the rights of men and women. As for capitalism and free enterprise, they have seen them almost wholly as exploitation and profiteering by their own ruling oligarchies and by foreign conquerors.

THUS totalitarianism, the police state and arbitrary government, which are what the Westerners, even Western Communists find intolerable in the Soviet system, are neither new nor strange in Asia. They are old and familiar. They are the normal lot of men. Between Chinese war lords and Chinese commissars, between Chiang and Mao, between the one-party system of the Kuomintang and the one-party system of the Communists, between an oligarchy ruling from a palace and a Politburo installed in the same palace, the difference to the masses of the people is not nearly so evident as we might wish to believe.

Indeed, where the Western way of life has really begun to penetrate Asia, the impact is more profoundly revolutionary upon the habits and the customs of the people than is the Stalinist version of communism. A new set of masters is no novelty in a continent that has known an endless succession of invaders and conquerors. What would be really new and revolutionary in Asia would be that the people should begin to believe that they have no masters, except those they themselves choose and can remove. For that idea would disturb, is in fact disturbing and dissolving, not merely political systems but the inner structure of the family, the clan and the tribe.

THE DRAMA of Asia, as I see it, turns upon the fact that in the past 50 years the whole existing system of government has been broken down by wars, occupation, revolution, corruption and decay. Less than 50 years ago—a short time anywhere, a mere moment in the Orient—the continent of Asia was governed by the Ottoman, the Romanoff, the Manchu, the Japanese, the British, the Dutch, the French and the Portuguese empires. All have dissolved and are disappearing. The question everywhere is who is to succeed them, who is to inherit their sovereign power to govern?

The answers to the question are, and must long remain, tentative. In China for the time being, which may be quite a long time, the answer is one which we find disconcerting in the extreme. In southeast Asia there is as yet no answer, but perhaps with great wisdom and energy we may yet cotribute to the answer. Only in Turkey, Pakistan, and India—the three principal powers of southern Asia—can it be said with reasonable confidence that the conditions are not unfavorable to the formation of governments, which are friendly to the West and can hope to endure.

But they will need a very enlightened sympathy from the nations of the Western world. They will need that as much as, for the long run perhaps even more than, they need a military guaranty against aggression and material help in making somewhat more tolerable the standard of their life.

Women on Job Might Solve Drought, Mrs. Roosevelt Says

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt yesterday called New York's water shortage a "housekeeping job" and hinted that a few women on the job might have "thought a little ahead" and prevented it.

Speaking before the Washington section of the Society of American Foresters at a luncheon in the YWCA, Mrs. Roosevelt described America as a "very wasteful Nation. We have been using pioneer ways long after they should have been dropped."

"We must set the example for a great deal of the world," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "Our country is open for all the world to come and see. The rest of the world knows about every failure that we make. Our failure in really conserving the basic things . . . gives some people the chance to say that we have proved that human beings aren't capable of doing things under their own steam."

Education Guards Democracy

Mrs. Roosevelt, who is United States delegate to the United Nations, said she believed education to be the most important way of preserving a democracy.

"If education really teaches our young people to think," she said, "we need not be afraid if they are taught some things which we think are dangerous."

Mrs. Roosevelt said that "one of the major things that must be done in the coming years is to stop wasting as much as we have in the past if we expect to go on eating in the future."

Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out that because the United Nations has not been able to achieve "mutual understanding between USSR and the United States on atomic energy, we don't realize that other things go on in the U. N. which create an atmosphere in which peace can grow."

Sees No U. N. Troops Now

Mrs. Roosevelt predicted that "for some time to come" it is "not likely" that a force will be created within the U. N. to enforce its decisions, but added that "we should put those agencies within U. N. to work to increase understanding and make pepole work together on projects where they can see results."

On the New York water shortage, Mrs. Roosevelt said she didn't know whether the shortage was caused by last summer's drought or "whether it is a result of the gentlemen who run that particular department in New York City not having thought of what extra water they might need as time went on."

Mrs. Roosevelt said they "should have started a little sooner" on the proposed project to draw water from Lake Ontario for the city. "What we might need," she said, "is a few women, because that's a housekeeping job. Perhaps the women would have thought a little ahead."

Political Economy

By Ysabel Rennie

"Socialized" Medicine

AS THE American Medical Association levies $25 dues on all doctors to fight the Administration's bill for compulsory health insurance, Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, bete noire of the AMA, is touring Europe to find out how compulsory insurance has worked elsewhere.

The Administration health bill, S. 1679, is comprehensive and, its enemies say, unworkable. It provides scholarships, living allowances and grants for the education of nurses, doctors and dentists; makes money available for medical research and hospital construction; provides medical facilities for rural areas where shortages now exist; makes grants to State and local authorities for health work; provides grants for maternal and child health and research; and sets up a comprehensive system of prepaid compulsory health insurance which will cover some 85 percent of the people in this country.

American doctors have concentrated their fire on Title VII, which is the provision for health insurance. This is not because they like the rest of the bill more, but because they dislike it less.

In the past year they have spent some two million dollars on a campaign against national health insurance which, they assert, would convert American medicine into a "pill mill." Doctors would be ruled by a "medical commissar in Washington"—the quotation is from their literature—and it would cost you, the citizen, up to 10 percent of your salary in payroll taxes.

WHAT ARE the actual provisions of the Administration bill? Personal health services would be made available without fee to all persons covered and to their dependents. These services would include medical and dental care, hospitalization and home nursing.

Doctors would be free to join or to refuse to join the service. Patients could freely elect their own doctor so long as he was a member of the system. In each locality the doctors themselves would choose how they wished to be paid: by straight salary; by a capitation fee for each patient on the doctor's list; or by a separate fee for services rendered, as at present. The Government, not the patient, would pay the bill.

The health service is to be financed by a 3 percent tax on payrolls up to annual earnings of $4800 a year. Half of this tax would be paid by workers, half by employers. Any additional costs would come from the Treasury. The annual cost is estimated by the sponsors at 5.6 billion dollars a year, of which about three fourths would be covered by the payroll tax. The AMA asserts that the cost would be 15 billion dollars a year.

Propoents of the plan argue that we lose 27 billion dollars a year through sickness, and that the cost would not be heavy in view of the possible advantages to be gained. The cost of illness would not fall on those unfortunates who need medical help, but would be shared by all. A medical education would not be restricted to the wealthy, but would be available to the most gifted, irrespective of ability to pay.

The AMA argues that there is no need for such a drastic law. The health of the American people is good, and there is no real shortage of doctors. Furthermore anyone who cannot afford medical care can afford one of the voluntary health insurance plans, except perhaps for the indigent who can always receive charity.

IN GENERAL, the testimony of the doctors vs. that of the Federal Security Administration represents the difference between the statement "my glass is half full" and "my glass is half empty."

The AMA sees how drastically death rates have been cut since the beginning of this century, how fine are the medical services, and how great has been the growth of voluntary plans for health and hospitalization insurance.

Those who support the bill recall the ding-dong battle between Group Health and the AMA which was fought all the way to the Supreme Court.

Besides, they say, voluntary insurance does not cover chronic diseases, long hospitalization, or the illness of persons over 65, and these account for our most serious health problems today. Old people suffer four times as much illness as those under 65. Today 11 million persons are of retirement age; by 1975 the number will be 18 million. Who is going to care for their health?

Differences of opinion extend even to the question of whether we have enough doctors. The AMA says yes; our figure of one doctor to every 750 persons is the best in the world outside of Palestine. Proponents of the bill say no. The number of doctors has increased only 5 percent since 1939, and hospitals are crying for internes. Medical schools this year will graduate 5500 doctors, and the hospitals need 9500. Nurses are in even shorter supply.

Seymour Harris of Harvard, pointing out that we are devoting much less of our national income to health today then we were in 1933, makes this striking statement: between 1900 and 1960, our population will have increased by two thirds, our real income by five times, the number of old people by four times, and the number of doctors by one half.

Would this be remedied by a national health service such as the one now operating in England? How has the British plan worked, out? Again, the answer seems to depend less on what American observers see there than on what they want to see. Britain's national health service has become a far more controversial subject in the Great Britain.

CIO Office Workers Charge Anti-Red Hearing Is 'Rigged'

By The Associated Press

The CIO Office and Professional Workers Union cut short its defense against charges that it has Communist leanings yesterday with an assertion that a CIO committee hearing was "rigged" in advance.

Union President James Durkin set forth the group's position in an 11-page statement that denied it followed the policies of the Communist Party rather than the CIO. Durkin said the union is thoroughly democratic.

It is one of 10 unions similarly accused, with ouster from the CIO as a possible penalty if the charges are sustained. Yesterday's was the opening hearing.

CIO Files $18,700 Suit

Meanwhile, the CIO slapped at Durkin's union with a Federal District Court suit here for $18,700, plus interest, which it contended was lent to the office workers and not repaid.

The suit contended that the national CIO, in exchange for three notes, lent the union $3200 in September, 1938; $500 in July, 1939, and $15,000 in December, 1941.

Durkin's statement said:

"The program, policies and activities of the UOPWA have always been constructed and decided by the membership of UOPWA acting through the democratic organs of their union—its conventions, referenda, conferences, elections, local unions, membership meetings, etc.

"No one and no political party has dictated to them in the past. No one and no political party shall in the future. . . ."

Charges "Red-Baiting"

Durkin said the CIO leadership "has fomented, aided, financed and abetted red-baiting, raiding and secession movements designed to 'subvert' UOPWA, to bring pressure upon it, to dismember it, in the expectation that such pressures would compel its membership to yield their right to make their own decisions and to govern their own union.

"These attempts have failed. Hence these charges and this new persecution."

Earlier, the CIO panel had barred a 40-member delegation of the accused union that sought to get into the hearing. The group peaceably submitted to orders that only eight could go into the room with Durkin.

After the office workers' hearing, the panel headed by strongly anti-Communist Emil Rieve will turn to charges against the CIO public workers. Eight other CIO unions are similarly accused.

Meanwhile, a second special committee had gone ahead with a separate set of charges against officers of the CIO California State Industrial Council who had failed to appear.

Officers' Ouster Asked

Several California locals have asked ouster of the officers, charging failure to follow basic CIO policy and that a program favored by the Communist Party was being pursued. They also are accused of interfering with affairs of international unions.

On another union front Federal Judge Charles F. McLaughlin ordered a two-day delay in a case that may help clarify the muddled labor picture in the electrical industry.

The United Electrical Workers, ousted by the CIO on charges of Communist-line policies, is disputing with the CIO's new international union of electrical workers, which was formed to shoulder the expelled UE out of the industry.

The delayed hearing is scheduled before the Baltimore regional office of the National Labor Relations Board, involving rival claims of the two unions. While the case waits, the court will hear arguments bearing on a UE claim that it holds contracts in the industry that should bar new collective bargaining elections.

Tobin Stresses Religion for 'Brotherhood'

The religious aspect of the observance of "Brotherhood Week" next February was stressed yesterday by Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, chairman of the District committee.

Speaking at a meeting of 19 religious, civic and Government leaders in his office to plan for the February 19-26 observance, the Secretary said, "I feel very strongly about this whole situation," calling for tolerance "no matter what your religion is."

Tobin called for a meeting of the various committees for further planning the last week in January at the Department of Labor.

Proposals were made at the meeting for mass meetings featured by nationally known entertainment talent, and a plea that the observance, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews "to get down to the grass roots more."

Low-Income Group Tax Aids Urged

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A congressional subcommittee yesterday heard a group of social workers discuss how the economic structure and tax policies of this country affect the social welfare of low-income groups.

Reginald A. Johnson, field director of the National Urban League, New York City, urged the Government to aid low-income families by exempting the first $2500 of earnings from income taxes.

At present a single person is given a $600 exemption and a married person $1200, with another $600 for each dependent.

In a discussion before the low-income families subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee, Edmond D. Butler, president of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, said the tax structure of the Nation has halted the efforts of private philanthropy to deal with problems of low-income families.

"Whether we like it or not the tax structure of this country has eliminated for all time in the forseeable future the possibility that private philanthropy can take care of these problems," Butler said. Large fortunes, he stated, have been taxed out of existence.

Butler congratulated the committee upon basing their study on family, rather than individual problems.

He recommended that the Government take steps to improve living conditions in Puerto Rico to check the "migration" of Puerto Ricans to New York's Harlem.

"I can show you four-room apartments on Manhattan Island with 24 people living in them," he said, "and they think that's better than Puerto Rico."

Butler also said it was the responsibility of Government to so revise its educational system that all young people are not channeled into the one mold of low-paid white collar jobs. Schools should teach that it is no disgrace to take a job that is dirty, Butler said.

Helen Hall, director of the Henry Street Settlement, New York City, asked that the way be made easier for workers to migrate in search of jobs. She said it is "a real American trait to get up and go some place else seeking opportunities."

Dr. Margaret Creeck of the Travelers Aid Society agreed that State laws often stop workers

Alien Wins Deportation Test Case

In a test case, the U. S. Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that aliens throughout the country who are threatened with deportation can file suit in Washington in answer.

The decision, Federal authorities said, affects, perhaps 50 similar cases which have already been decided in favor of the Government.

It will delay numerous deportation proceedings, reporters were told.

The test was brought by Peder Kristian Kristensen, now in Detroit and a citizen of Denmark who entered the United States in 1939 to attend the New York Worlds Fair and to visit relatives. He was caught here by the war and got a job in violation of the terms of his visa.

However, it was impractical to deport him during the war and he married here. Meanwhile, he had obtained exemption from military service as an alien.

He asked the Board of Immigration Appeals to suspend his deportation but this was denied solely because his "exemption from military service had been secured at the price of a perpetual bar to naturalization," his suit said.

The Government contended that Kristensen had to file for a writ of habeas corpus in the jurisdiction where he would be deported. But to do this, the Appeals Court said, he would have to "voluntarily go in custody for deportation."

The court found that he could sue the Attorney General here under the Declaratory Judgment and Administrative Procedure Acts.

Grand Jury to Take Up Maragon Case Today

A District grand jury today at 10 a.m. is to begin hearing evidence of perjury against John Maragon, a key figure in the recent investigation of five-percenters here.

Maragon, a friend of Maj. Harry H. Vaughn, had testified to his activities before a congressional unit investigating agents for businessmen seeking Government contracts.

Representing the Government in the grand jury probe is Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray.

1949 Crop Output 2d Largest, May Presage Broad Controls

called upon to invoke production controls of various kinds in an attempt to reduce the volume next year. Crops likely to be produced under controls of some kind or other include cotton, peanuts, major types of tobacco, rice, potatoes and soybeans.

This year's big volume has been reflected in lower producer prices and in a drop in farm income.

The department said the huge harvest was the result of uniformly large production of most crops, rather than record volumes of a few individual ones. Records were marked up only for rice, dry beans and peas.

But a corn crop of 3,378,000,000 bushels is only 8 percent below last year's record of 3,682,000,000, and is 21 percent above the average.

This is the fifth recent year in which the production of corn—the raw material for meats, dairy and poultry products — has exceeded three billion bushels.

This year's production includes near-record crops of soybeans, grain, sorghum and tree nuts, relatively large crops of cotton, cottonseed, wheat, oats, flaxseed, tobacco, apples, peaches, cherries, hops, cranberries, sugar cane for sugar, and truck crops.

Smaller than average crops were reported only for barley, rye, buckwheat, popcorn, sorghum forage and silage, dry peas, sweet potatoes, sorghum and sugar cane syrup, apricots and maple products.

The indicated acreage harvested, the yield per acre, and production, respectively, of important crops in nearby States included:

CORN—Maryland, 483,000 acres harvested, 38 bushels per acre, and production 18,354,000 bushels; Virginia, 1,140,000, 47, and 53,580,000; West Virginia, 267,000, 44 and 11,748,000.

PEANUT (picked and threshed)—Virginia, 139,000 acres harvested, 1350 pounds per acre, and production 187,650,000 pounds.

SOYBEANS (for beans)—Virginia, 177,600 acres harvested, 18 bushels per acre, and production 2,106,000 bushels.

TOBACCO—Maryland, 50,000 acres harvested, 820 pounds per acre and production 41,000,000 pounds; Virginia, 120,300, 1141, and 137,262,000; West Virginia, 3300, 1400 and 4,620,000.

APPLE (commercial production only)—Virginia, 7,820,000 bushels; West Virginia, 3,720,000.

POTATOES—Maryland, 13,800 acres harvested, 115 bushels per acre, and production 1,587,000 bushels; Virginia, 54,000; 169, and 9,126,000.

SWEET POTATOES—Maryland, 9000 acres harvested, 150 bushels per acre, and product on 1,350,000 bushels; Virginia, 24,000; 120, and 2,880,000.

B&O Announces 10-Day Furlough For 2575 Workers

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP). — The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad today announced a 10-day furlough for 2575 workers in its shops.

The layoff was attributed to "subnormal business conditions and car loadings not what they should be." It starts at the end of the work day Friday and continues until January 3.

The shopmen affected are those in plants where heavy repairs are made on locomotives and cars. They included 600 at Cumberland, Md.; 300 at Glenwood, Pa.; 300 at Dubois, Pa.; 175 at Washington, Ind., and 1200 in Baltimore.

The B&O furloughed 13,000 employes at the height of the recent coal and steel strikes. As of December 1, some 4600 still were on furlough.

Truman Ends Vacation Today; Four Important Jobs Open

Key West, Fla., Dec. 19 (AP).—President Truman concludes a three-week Florida vacation tonight without filling four vitally important posts upon which he is expected to act soon.

1. He flies back to Washington Tuesday still facing a decision on:

2. A successor to David E. Lilienthal as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

3. A new chairman of his Economic Advisory Council, succeeding Dr. Edward G. Nourse, who quit after differences with fellow members.

4. Filling the long-vacant post of chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

5. A new special counsel to serve him when Clark M. Clifford steps out early in the new year to enter private law practice in Washington.

Several names are under consideration by the President for the atomic energy post. Lilienthal has agreed to remain on the job after his resignation becomes effective December 31 if any pending problems require his attention.

The President does not want to appoint a successor to Nourse until after presentation to Congress of his annual economic message. He does not want to involve the new man in a report in the writing of which he had had no part.

In the case of the chairmanship of the National Security Resources Board, the President wants to act as soon as possible.

Clifford doesn't know how long he will stay on as presidential counsel, speech writer and adviser. He and the Preseident will work that out in January after the State-of-the-Union, budget and economic messages have gone to Congress.

The President took his last dip in the Gulf today. He goes to Washington a tanner but not a thinner man. He appears completely rested and relaxed.

The President meets with his Cabinet at 10 a. m. Thursday. Then, he flies to Independence, Mo., Friday morning to spend the Christmas holidays at his home there with Mrs. Truman and Margaret.

His take-off time Tuesday is 8:45 a. m., which should put him in the Washington airport (MATS) about noon or a little after.

Old Age Levies Go Up 50% Jan. 1

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Beginning January 1 every citizen covered under the old-age and survivors insurance system will have the amount of his withholding tax for this purpose increased by 50 per cent.

This means that the citizen earning $3000 who has previously had $30 annually deducted from his pay for old-age and survivors benefit insurance will now have $45 deducted.

The employer will also pay a correspondingly increased tax. Both employers and employes will pay one and one-half cents on each dollar instead of one cent on each dollar.

Locally there are about 275,000 employes who will be affected by the tax increase. As of October 30 this year, there were 18,626 employers in the District of Columbia who will also be affected by the tax increase.

Nationally there are now 35 million jobs covered by the old-age and survivors insurance systems. In the calendar year 1949 688 million dollars were paid out in benefits.

1.68 Billions Collected in 1949

In the fiscal year ending June 30 last the Government collected about one billion, 680 million dollars in revenue from the old-age and survivors insurance system.

It is estimated that by next July 1, $2,424,000,000 will have been collected in this fiscal period.

Victor Sadd, manager of the Washington field office of the Social Security Administration, said yesterday the increase in the amount of contributions paid by employer and employe further outlines the importance of correct and complete reporting by employers with the closest cooperation of employes.

"Only in this way," said Sadd, "can the wage earner be certain that he is getting full credit for all of the old-age and survivors insurance he is buying.

"The files of the Bureau of Old Age and Survivors Insurance had 80 million names and numbers," Sadd said.

30,000 John Smiths

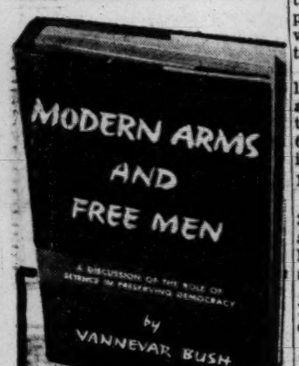

"Better than 30,000 are 'John Smith' and more than 5000 are 'Joe Johnson.' But each and every 'John Smith' and 'Joe Johnson' has a different Social Security number. The name alone is not enough.

"That's why it's so very important for each worker to show his Social Security card to his employer the moment he is hired. The employe shouldn't rely on memory or scribble his number on a slip of paper and hand it to his employer."

Sadd also stressed that workers, particularly women who have married since getting their Social Security cards, have the records of the Social Security Administration corrected to show any change in name. A form for this purpose is available at the local field office.

The account card, Sadd said, should also be brought in or mailed in with the form, if possible, and a corrected card showing the new name but the same account number will be prepared for the employe.

Employes who have lost their cards and need replacements, as well as those desiring to change their records, can contact the Washington field office at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., Sadd said.

Disabled Veteran Becomes Watchmaker

DELICATE WORK—Andrew N. Phucas, 28-year-old paralyzed World War II veteran gets instruction from Charles J. Zeller, of Peters School of Horology, as he pursues the study of watchmaking at his home under Veterans' Administration supervision. Zeller is also a disabled World War II veteran who gets around on crutches. Phucas lives at 9019 Flower ave., Silver Spring, Md.

By James B. Graham
Post Reporter

A Silver Spring World War II veteran, paralyzed by a sniper's bullet, is well on his way toward his goal of becoming an independent businessman.

The former GI, Andrew N. Phucas of 9019 Flower ave., Silver Spring, completed an 18-month course in watchmaking last month and according to a Veterans' Administration spokesman is proficient enough now to open his own business.

But Phucas intends to continue his trade studies for another six months in an advanced course before starting out on his own.

The 28-year-old veteran, paralyzed from the waist down by the bullet which lodged in his spinal cord, began the study of watchmaking early in 1948 under an instructor of the Peters School of Horology who taught him in his own home.

Phucas' instructor, Charles J. Zeller, is himself a disabled World War II veteran who stayed with the school as a teacher after completing his own studies. Struck down by polio while in service, he now gets around with crutches.

Phucas entered the Army in 1942 while still attending school and went overseas in July, 1944. The following September he was wounded near Metz, Germany.

A member of the Eightieth Infantry Division, he participated in the breakthrough by General Patton's Third Army.

He was sighted by a German sniper one day when he raised himself from a foxhole to turn around during a lull in the action.

All told, he spent a year and a half in hospitals in France, England and the United States.

During that time he gradually came to the realization that he would never walk again.

"I know that if I was to support myself it would have to be with my hands," he said.

After studying several vocations, he decided to make watchmaking his career and arranged with the Veterans' Administration to begin studies.

After completing the advanced course dealing with chronograph watches he expects to set up a shop in his home where he can do work sent him by jewelers.

Much of his optimism comes from the unflagging support given by his wife, Betty Lou, he said. He met Betty Lou while in service, he recalled, and married her in October, 1948, while studying toward his chosen career.

"I was just an ordinary GI," Phucas said when asked if he won any decorations. "I just got the usual Combat Infantryman's Badge in addition to the Purple Heart."

But he has no intention of being "just an ordinary watchmaker." He's going to be one of the best.

Road Projects 37% Ahead In Maryland

The Maryland State Roads Commission has achieved 37 percent more work in 1949 than was promised at the start of the year, a survey shows.

The commission had set a "must" program of 80 projects covering 221 miles of road to cost 40 million dollars. The record of actual performance shows 120 projects covering 262 miles of road and costing approximately 55 million dollars.

These figures include contracts awarded and those on which bids will be in hand by December 31 but does not include the 41 million dollars Chesapeake Bay Bridge project which is a revenue bond and engineered independently of the roads commission.

The 1949 schedule called for 23 primary construction jobs totaling 75 miles at a cost of 34 million dollars. The performance record shows 39 such primary jobs awarded or advertised covering 89 miles at a cost of 45 million dollars.

On widening and resurfacing work, the program called for 57 projects covering 146 miles at a cost of 6 million dollars while the performance record shows that actually 81 projects were awarded or advertised for 173 miles at a cost of more than 10 million dollars.

The program included 13 bridges and highway separation projects, including the bridges over the Severn River, Patuxent River, South River, Kent Narrows, Monocacy River, Choptank River and Stony Run.

The commission had set a 40-million-dollar goal for 1948, the first full year of the State's accelerated highway building program, but fell short of the goal by about 4 million dollars. The excess of performance for 1949 makes up for the 1948 shortage

The G-Men Mop Up On Mexican Border

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL'S "Border Incident" finds a new setting for the labors of Government agents. The borders of California's Imperial Valley are well photographed and interesting, but the film is strangely unexciting.

This is a story, by John C. Higgins, about how Mexican laborers are spirited across the border to work in the profitable valley and how they are prayed upon by the unscrupulous of both countries.

To combat such traffic and to punish those who take advantage of the unwary, it appears that both the United States and Mexican Governments get together on the problem. In this case, reputedly a composite of many, George Murphy plays a United States agent while Ricardo Montalban acts a member of Mexico's FBI.

As have so many players in the recent vogue of pictures about governmental activities, both men ask for a pack of trouble. The migratory workers we learn, are equally mistreated by evil-doers of both nations. The one accepts bribes for illegal entry permits and fake working papers; the other treats such people as slaves.

Montalban passes himself off as a Mexican seeking illegal entry; Murphy follows him through to complete the circle coverage. Rough going dogs both, including a rugged end for Murphy and skullduggery from such accomplished skullduggers as Arnold Moss, Howard da Cilva, Alphonso Bedoya and Sig Ruman.

Both heroes are played with likable naturalness and there's an interesting new face in one chap, a victimized bracero. This is James Mitchell, who scored an overwhelming success in the dancing lead of "Brigadoon." He doesn't dance in this one, but what he does is noticeable.

The tone of the picture is serious but too slow and measured for the picture's good. John Alton's camera work of the border area is eye-filling and imaginative, there being several tip-top air views.

Mind Wizard on Stage

The Capitol's stage bill is topped by Harry Kahne, that remarkable fellow who adds, spells, talks and writes upside down, backwards and sideways. It's a might clever act, but the distractions of a wandering radio "comic" help neither the audience's attention nor simplify Kahne's remarkable concentration.

Ross Wyse, jr., and Peggy Womack offer a comedy turn; the house gets fun out of their genial ways. Florence Ahn, an Oriental songstress, gives pleasantly novel lilts to popular Occidental soprano arias. Renald and Rudy are two strong men with a well-timed turn. WTOP's disc jockey, Gene Klavan, ambles into the proceedings, raising the thought that a good disc jockey isn't necessarily a good vaudeville comic.

VINCENT DOUGHERTY, the Universal man whose health has been of deep concern along film row, is considerably better at the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital; over a dozen blood transfusions have been necessary for this past Chief Barker of the Variety Club, but it's now hoped he'll be able to be home by Christmas.

REDGE ALLEN, whose GI loan revived the Olney Theater into its present lucrative elan, is another hospitalized showman, if that's the term . . . The WTOP announcer has been at Emergency too long now and both his and Dougherty's holiday plights may serve as a reminder that Yule's no time to be accouched with ailments . . . Friends of both hope they'll be "out" and "themselves," as the phrases have it, soon.

THERE'S one of those "Sneak Previews" tonight at 8:35 at the Unnatural National . . . Which means you get "David Harum," with Will Rogers, and "a new Columbia comedy," if you time your entrance right.

CHAOS more than ordinary prevails in the town's film booking centers . . . The Palace was to have had "Prince of Foxes" beginning Christmas Eve; that's suddenly off for at least a month, William Powell in "Dancing in the Dark" opening that day instead . . . The Trans-Lux was to have had "The Third Man,' fresh from Britain; that's out in favor of Louis Hayward in "The Pirates of Capri" . . . The Dupont was to have had "Germany Year Zero"; instead a new double bill goes in today: "Man's Hope," from Spain and the Malraux novel, sharing the bill with "Hideout for Love," a French yarn with Arletty and Michele Simone . . . Not Michele Morgan or Simone Simon, but Michele Simone! . . . And the Pix sticks by "Indiscretion" and "Venus of Paris" after a wing-ding weekend . . . All vastly confusing.

THE GIRL WHO—Smiles in a wreath is Wanda Hendrix, who, apart from Christmas decoration, soon will be seen in "After Midnight" and "Prince of Foxes"

Trial of Three In Bogus Bills Case Opens

Two defendants in a counterfeiting case pleaded guilty yesterday and three others went to trial in District Court.

The case, according to Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin, involves the printing here of about $100,000 in bogus $20 notes. Less than $2000 of the sum was distributed before the defendants were arrested, he said.

The guilty pleas were entered by Eugene H. Creighton, 26, and Walter W. Kidwell, 31, both of 1315 Delafield pl. nw. They admitted manufacturing and forging the counterfeit money.

Those who pleaded innocent and elected to stand trial are William E. Hughes, 26, and his wife, Josephine, both of 6000 13th st. nw., charged with possessing a suitcaseful of the notes, and Aurthur M. Bebar, 33, of 1013 17th st. ne., charged with manufacturing the bills.

The case was broken July after George Strombos of Cleveland, Ohio, was arrested for trying to pass three of the notes in that city. He is now a Government witness who, it is charged, bought four of the counterfeit bills from Creighton for $5 each.

The Government opened its case yesterday before Judge Alexander Holtzoff and a jury of seven women and five men with routine testimony, on the locations of the alleged crimes.

New Car Sales Here Up 12% In 11 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington new car sales in November totaled 2355, a small gain over the same 1948 month, the Washington Automotive Trade Association reported yesterday.

Akers

This brought local sales for the first 11 months to 30,976, a postwar high for the period and an increase of 12 percent over the corresponding period last year.

Evidence of a prosperous year here in auto sales came yesterday from Floyd D. Akers, president of Capitol Cadillac-Olsmobile Co. of Washington and Akers Oldsmobile Cadillac Co. of Alexandria.

Akers announced distribution of 25 percent of profits for 1949 to the companies' 240 employes. Each employe will receive one share amounting to $50.27 for each full year of employment. For instance, a worker with 10 years of service will receive $502.70. Akers further stated that each employe will receive 7.3 percent of his annual salary as additional distribution. A Christmas turkey also will be given to all employes at the annual Yule party of the company on Thursday.

The 1950 models are being previewed by some local auto dealers. Regional Dodge dealers today will travel to Atlantic City to see the new cars which will be introduced publicly on January 4. The new Dodges went into production early in December. Dodge retail sales this year have been the highest in history and Sales Supervisor D. T. Stanton said he expects an even better year in 1950.

Buick dealers of the Washington zone, accompanied by their sales and service personnel, met here yesterday for a preview of the 1950 line. Of particular interest to them was data on the new F-263 engine which Buick is bringing out for 1950. Public announcement of the new line is scheduled for early January.

BONUS: More than $11,000 was shared by some 550 employes of the G. C. Murphy Co. in the Washington area when the variety store chain distributed its Christmas bonus. The bonus plan has been in effect for more than 25 years, according to President P. L. Sample.

CHAIRMEN: Fred A. Smith, president of the D. C. Building and Loan League, yesterday announced appointment of the following chairmen:

Membership, Wilfred H. Blanz; resolutions, Edward K. Jones; GI loans, Carl H. Ellington; institute advisory, Raymond C. Williams; advertising and publicity, W. S. Martindill; audit, William E. Poulton; nominations, Edward L. McAleer.

ODD LOTS: The Hilton interests have renamed their newly-acquired unit in San Diego, Calif., the Hotel Manor. It formerly was known as Imig Manor . . . Debating team of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, defeated a Philadelphia team Friday night, making up for a loss to the Baltimore team two weeks ago . . . Stockholders of Coca-Cola approved a proposal to offer one common share for each three shares of Class A stock held . . . Fire losses in the United States increased 8.6 percent in November over October . . . Federal Mills, Inc., of Lockport, N. Y., has been sold to International Milling Co. of Minneapolis . . . Steel output this week is scheduled at 94.5 percent of capacity, against 94.1 last week.

AWARD: A citation for outstanding efforts in publicizing and promoting the sale of Series E Savings Bonds was presented to the Perpetual Building Association. The award, signed by Treasury Secretary John W. Synder, was given to Edward C. Baltz, Perpetual's president, by Thomas J. Groom, chairman of D. C. Committee, Savings Bond Section.

YULE SPIRIT: More than 600 attended the Christmas party of the Riggs National Bank Saturday night at the Mayflower. John Gibbins was installed as president of the employes club, succeeding Earle Simmons . . . Bonus checks were distributed by Santa to about 200 employes of the Hamilton National Bank at the Christmas party Saturday night in the Columbia Country Club.

EARNINGS: Virginia Electric & Power Co. reported net income of $7,667,692 or $1.69 a common share for the 12 months ended November 30, compared with $5,798,797 or $1.47 a share in the previous 12 months. Other earnings statements:

CENTRAL for CARDOZO

ALL THE CARDOZO HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS SHOULD BE TRANSFERRED TO THE CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING—IMMEDIATELY!!!

We are not educational experts—in fact, you don't have to be an expert to know that the education afforded some children in the Nation's Capital is vastly inferior to education for other children. For instance, more than 2500 Negro boys and girls of kindergarten age are not in school because the Board of Education provides no facilities. For another instance, Negro junior high school children are housed in elementary schools because sufficient junior high school buildings are unavailable.

But we find the most glaring example of unequal education at the senior high school level. The eight white high schools are rated by the Strayer Survey as superior to all of the Negro high schools. On a thousand-point scale the white high schools average 711, which means "very satisfactory school buildings." On the same scale the pitifully inadequate Negro high schools average 404, which is more than 300-points below the other group. And Cardozo has a score of only 373. The eight white high schools are located all over the city, whereas, the Negro high schools are clustered together within a quarter mile radius of each other. Some Negro children travel more than five miles and no white child need travel more than one and a half miles.

Not only are the Negro senior high schools inadequate but they are overcrowded. Although seven of the eight white high schools are under capacity—actually, 6,000 additional children could be housed in these seven schools—all three of the Negro high schools are overcrowded. According to the figures of the Board of Education, 1,000 more children are in Negro high schools than should be housed in their three senior high school buildings. In the past, white high school students have been overcrowded—but they occupied very satisfactory buildings at the time. Furthermore, there was not sufficient space in a colored high school to accommodate them. So the situation today is vastly different.

The history of high school building shows sharp discrimination. No Negro high school has been built since the first World War. But six white high schools have been built. Further, the Board has been "considering since 1929," according to the Superintendent, a new high school for Negro children; but, in 1949 no new school is available. In fact, it is very likely that a new school will not be ready until 1952 following twenty-three years' effort.

Effort to relieve Cardozo has been slow. The Board of Education has been well aware that Cardozo was inadequate and overcrowded and that the white high schools were half empty. The late Congressman George Bates in 1948 in open hearing asked why the overcrowding in Negro high schools wasn't ended by using Central high school or other white high schools.

CARDOZO MUST BE ABANDONED

DO YOU KNOW THAT—Cardozo's Major Problem is "Building Inadequacy?" Both the Washington Board of Trade and the Strayer Survey have carefully examined Cardozo High School and have judged the school as completely unsatisfactory. The Middle States Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges in 1943 rated the school as "grossly inadequate." Strayer "recommends that the Cardozo plant be abandoned as a school."

The Board of Trade points out that the "interior of the building is of frame construction and neither fireproof nor resistant." The Board of Trade also notes that it was abandoned in 1931 as a white high school.

The Board of Trade points out the complete absence of playground or stadium facilities for a school located on two well-traveled highways. The Board says the "cafeteria seats only 248 pupils," or only one fourth of the capacity and 13.8% of its enrollment. The Board says the gymnasium is "only about half the size of a standard gymnasium," and we note that two gymnasiums should be provided in a high school. The Board says the "library can accommodate only 84 pupils," or but 4.7% of the present enrollment. The auditorium, which seats only 490 pupils of an enrollment of 1796, is also a "fire hazard" because of its second floor location. The cafeteria has a capacity for only 248 people at one sitting, approximately one-seventh of the current student enrollment, as shown by a recent official survey.

The Board of Trade was further concerned because only "four single shower heads are available for more than 1,000 girls; eight shower heads" for the boys. The Board noted the inadequate storage space for musical instruments, unavailable study hall space for boys and girls who must use the assembly hall while orchestra and choral groups rehearse.

The Board of Trade, in addition to noting that the interior was a fire hazard, reports that the Fire Marshal rates the stairwells as unsatisfactory to meet fire regulations.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—Cardozo is highly overcrowded?
1,796 boys and girls are crowded into a school for which the Board of Education sets a capacity of 1,040. (Incidentally, Strayer sets different standards—the capacity is 845, and the excess is 951 children.)

Cardozo must operate on a triple-shift to accommodate all the children. Some children come at 8 a. m., others as late as 10 a. m. to get six hours. But the school day with inadequate facilities means simply putting in time, not learning.

Cardozo's site measures less than an acre, although the standard recommended by Strayer is twenty acres and although the white high schools average more than ten acres.

Cardozo's general classrooms are far from adequate for 1,796 pupils or even for its capacity of 1,040 pupils, and the special classrooms are scored 40 points out of a possible 140 points (by Strayer).

The Board of Education also recognizes the need to replace this unsatisfactory building.

WHY SHOULD NEGRO CHILDREN SHARE INADEQUATE FACILITIES WHEN AVAILABLE EMPTY PUPIL STATIONS ARE AVAILABLE IN OTHER DISTRICT HIGH SCHOOLS?

PARK VIEW IS NO SOLUTION

The Superintendent's recommendation to the Board of Education that 500 girls be transferred from Cardozo to Park View Elementary School is no good. We strongly object to this inadequate remedy.

500 girls to Park View will end co-educational work for these students, who thus will be denied a progressive educational opportunity provided for white pupils.

500 girls in 14 classrooms means an average of 35.7 girls per classroom, whereas, the Board of Education standard is 25 students per classroom. 40% overcrowding results—a poor solution for the present overcrowding at Cardozo as long as empty pupil stations are available in white high schools.

Park View is an inadequate school for high school instruction. It has no science laboratories (biology, chemistry, physics). The school rates very low in general classrooms—36 white elementary schools have higher ratings.

In fact, the rating that Park View did receive from the Strayer report resulted from its classifications as a platoon school—but of no significance for high school instruction.

Many Negro girls, who already travel five miles to reach Cardozo (although white high schools are conveniently located) will have to travel an additional distance to reach a school at the northern limit of Negro residences.

One school official, Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, considers the combination of elementary and senior high school students in one building as the least desirable education situation. (Interrogatory in Bishop vs. Doyle, 17 February, 1949).

Superintendent Corning recommended transfer of 500 girls in order that cadet activities of boys at Cardozo might not be interfered with. What about the girl cadet training for those transferred to Park View?
We oppose the transfer to Park View because opportunity for these girls to participate in school wide activities—the newspaper, orchestra, glee club, athletic teams, dramatics, school clubs—would be lost.
We question whether transfer of the girls means that the Board intends to abandon the reading clinic at Park View. Cardozo will still be 30% overcrowded—even after the transfer, and its major problem of building inadequacy remains untouched. No space will be available for expected increase in the number of elementary school pupils at Park View.

CENTRAL MUST BE TRANSFERRED

Superintendent Corning lists the following advantages of the transfer of Central High School to house Cardozo students.

1. "Immediate and full relief" would be provided Cardozo.
2. Such a transfer "would remove danger of loss of accreditation of Cardozo High School."
3. "Some specialized facilities would be supplied which are either lacking or inadequate at Cardozo, such as gymnasiums, cafeteria, swimming pool, stadium, armory, and rifle range."
4. "An economy of approximately $3,500,000 not including site would be effected by making unnecessary the construction of the new Cardozo High School."

We add the following advantages:

1. For the first time since the first World War Negro high students would be housed in an adequate high school building.
2. For the first time Negro high schools would begin to be located on a regional basis—as the white high schools are located—instead of clustered in one quarter-mile radius.
3. For the first time Negro high school children would have an opportunity to select from a comprehensive high school curriculum, as the white high school pupils can do, instead of being limited to a specialized curriculum.
4. Central is an adequate high school for high school children—Park View at best is an adequate elementary school.
5. High schools will be used more economically according to intended use and size. Specifically, Central now has but 822 high school students in a building intended by the Board of Education for 2,400 children. And the Central High School population is on the decrease. The current enrollment (September 16, 1949) represents a loss of 72 senior high school pupils in the past year, as shown by the administration's official report dated September 19, 1949.
6. The 434 Negro high school veterans could be housed in a high school building instead of a "cast-off" elementary school building; the total of 135 white high school veterans always have been housed in a high school building, with adequate physical plant facilities.

WHY DOESN'T THE SUPERINTENDENT RECOMMEND THE TRANSFER OF CENTRAL TO HOUSE THE CARDOZO BOYS AND GIRLS?

HE SAYS—
1. Central must be kept for white students to house an intended institute of 13th and 14th grades.

WE SAY—
Put the institute at McKinley Technical High School, obviously a counterpart to Armstrong and a half empty school with 1,200 vacant pupil stations and with excellent equipment for post-high school work. Or place the institute at Roosevelt, no less empty, with 50 percent available space or more than 1,000 vacant pupil stations and similar fine equipment. Or place these grades at Eastern with 1,200 vacancies.

HE SAYS—
2. Central must be kept for white children in the area of this high school.

WE SAY—
The 513 junior high school children now at Central can be easily located at Macfarland, which has 489 empty stations; at Langley, which has 582 vacant stations; or Gordon, which has 532 vacant stations. Actually, the white high school children live equally close to McKinley, Roosevelt, Western, Wilson, and even Eastern—and can conveniently be transferred to those schools.

HE SAYS—
3. Strayer did not recommend the transfer of Central to house Negro children.

WE SAY—
Literally, Strayer recommended that Central "be opened District-wide as a technical institute." Is the Superintendent ready to open Central institute to all children without regard to race or creed—which is our understanding of "District-wide?"

HE SAYS—
4. Transfer of Central on a permanent basis will affect the Board of Education "building program" for Negro high schools.

WE SAY—
Well, the transfer of Central certainly can't affect the building of Spingarn, which is authorized and partly appropriated for. The transfer of Central shouldn't affect the new Armstrong, which is a replacement for the most inadequate high school in the city.
Will it prevent a new Cardozo? In our considered judgment the Board has no building program that includes a new Cardozo as long as Congress has not authorized nor appropriated for a new site (now estimated to cost $2,000,000), plans, or school. A new Cardozo is a myth in spite of the Board's good intentions. Finally, we honestly don't believe that an appropriation of three million dollars (or even double that sum) could build a Cardozo equal to Central High School.
Retention of Central High School in its present partially-used state merely because of the sentimental attachment of former students cannot seriously be defended in the face of the PRESENT NEED of the children at Cardozo High School. The welfare of the children must be the basis of the Board's decision, not selection of a plan "most favorable to Central," as Mr. E. T. Dunlap, of the Central Alumni, requested in his statement on August 20, 1949, in which he also admitted that "the interests of the Alumni are based on sentiment."

6,000 EMPTY SEATS IN SEVEN HIGH SCHOOLS FOR WHITES MEANS AN UNJUST WASTE OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS OF ALL THE TAXPAYERS' MONEY — WHILE NEGRO STUDENTS AT CARDOZO ARE PRESENTLY THREATENED WITH A LOSS OF ACCREDITATION.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION MUST ACT UNIFORMLY FOR ALL CHILDREN IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

WE STRONGLY URGE—WITHOUT RESERVATION OR EQUIVOCATION—THAT THE BOARD OF EDUCATION TRANSFER CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL PLANT TO HOUSE CARDOZO CHILDREN.

EVERY CITIZEN SHOULD WRITE OR WIRE THE BOARD OF EDUCATION IMMEDIATELY.

GW Edges Generals, 63-61, on Moffatt's Late Goal

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

TEN DAYS AGO, the All-America Conference was suddenly, if not decently, interred, but its commissioner, O. O. Kessing, is refusing to roll over and play dead. In fact, he is stoutly maintaining there is still an AAC, that he is still its commissioner and they haven't shut up shop.

Povich

Actually, Commissioner Kessing will not be decommissioned until next month when the AAC winds up its affairs at the final, formal rites. But at that time, "there will be some surprises," Kessing has hinted and he has said flatly "We're not dead yet."

But no league boss ever looked more like a man without a league to boss than does Kessing at this time. Four of his seven teams were dissolved or merged with the NFL almost without a trace. The other three—Cleveland, San Francisco and Baltimore—moved bodily into the expanded, 13-club NFL.

If Kessing has any surprises to announce next month they are indeed vague right now. Everybody seems to be happy about reaching the end of pro football's four-year, red-ink bath except Kessing and the Cleveland Browns.

BUT KESSING is acting like a man who hasn't been left quite empty handed. The possibility is he may be drawing some strength from the Cleveland situation plus Buffalo's determination to stay in some pro football league—a reconstituted AAC, perhaps.

Out in Cleveland, Coach Paul Brown and Owner Arthur McBride have publicly announced their disgust with the alighment of the two new NFL divisions. They fear they'll be cast into a weaker circuit that won't have drawing power, and there are hints they won't buy the new deal.

At best, though, it appears to be flimsy support for Kessing. The Browns would be even higher and dryer if compelled to play in any new league sponsored by Kessig. There weren't enough good teams to fill the two leagues the last four years, and with the NFL having sucked into its own circuit the best of the AAC, any circuit re-formed by Kessing would be distinctly minor.

THE ENTHUSIASM for a league franchise in Buffalo is very real, with the fans having already subscribed $230,000 to underwrite a team. But in these days of inflated payrolls and expenses, that figure is a mere pittance and there is no substitute for rich men who ca ntake the rap. Just what surprises Kessing may be reserving are vague, but there is little evidence that they will be startling.

Pro football's losses in the suicidal four-year war are reckoned as between eight and ten million dollars, but better times apparently are ahead. Rid of the competitive bidding for players, and the demand for big bonuses, the owners can now operate far more cheaply and no longer do they need the average of a $30,000 gate to break even. If the crowds hold up, they may all show a profit.

But pro football has a new concern, and a very real one. In recent years, the frenzy over their game has subsided somewhat and college football has increased in popularity. The colleges are winning back the converts to pro football, with their more spirited type of play. If they aren't as clever or smart as the pros, the collegians neverthless can be exciting.

THE PROS have made a cheap thing of touchdowns, with their emphasis on forward passing and their game has devolved into basketball, with a smattering of football. In fact, their passing too often has become a bore, and it is significant that the fans have found the most thrilling player in the league to be the Eagles' Steve Van Buren, a throw-back to the old line-crashing heroes of yesteryear.

As Joe Williams has complained, the pros actually are playing football the easy way, with their passes. And it is a fact that the collegians play it harder. The college boys don't quite die for dear old Rutgers, but they tackle with more emphasis than the pros. The pros may block better, but blocking has never been one of the game's facets with which to fascinate the customers.

And the good hard, clean tackle has virtually gone out of pro football. The collegians still like to take that good leave-the-feet shot at a ball-carrier, and bring him down pronto. But the pros are more concerned with tackles that save touchdowns, and are willing to sacrifice a few yards. Their habit is to ride a player to the ground—anything to prevent a touchdown. Somehow it ain't the kind of football most folks have been brought up on.

Jim Tatum Won't Get Florida Job

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Maryland's Jim Tatum will not become football coach at the University of Florida.

Two men who should know said so last night.

One is the athletic supervisory member of the State Board of Control, which passes on all Florida U. high appointments. The other is D. K. Stanley, dean of Florida's physical education department, under whom the head football coach works.

"Tatum is not being considered," Ely Fink of Jacksonville told The Washington Post last night. "Tatum has not applied for the job and isn't under consideration," said Dean Stanley from Gainesville, Fla., home of the university.

Tatum's Demands Denied

And so, in the short space of one week, the 36-year-old Maryland coach has gone from a red-hot prospect, which he definitely was, to out of the running, which Fink and Dean Stanley say he definitely is.

Chief reason for Florida's sudden disinterest in Tatum, it was learned, was his demand that the intercollegiate athletics department, which the Florida football coach heads, be divorced from the physical education department. Under the present setup, the athletic director and football coach answer to the dean of physical education.

Tatum insisted that this be changed and that he be accountable only to the school's president, circumstances which he enjoys at Maryland.

No salary terms were discussed at the Gainesville meeting, it was also learned. The Florida coaching job, which also includes the directorship of athletics, is believed to pay $15,000, about $2000 more than Tatum earns at Maryland.

Upon his return from Florida last week when the Tatum-for-Florida boom was at its peak, Tatum said:

Hadn't Applied for Job

"If Florida is interested in me after January 2, I'm interested in Florida." Maryland plays Missouri in the Gator Bowl on January 2 in Jacksonville.

Tatum said he had not applied for the job—"the only thing I've ever applied for in my life was a Navy commission"—and Florida did not offer him the job.

He added he would like to discuss the situation in detail after the Gator Bowl game, but that he thought Florida would have engaged a new coach by then.

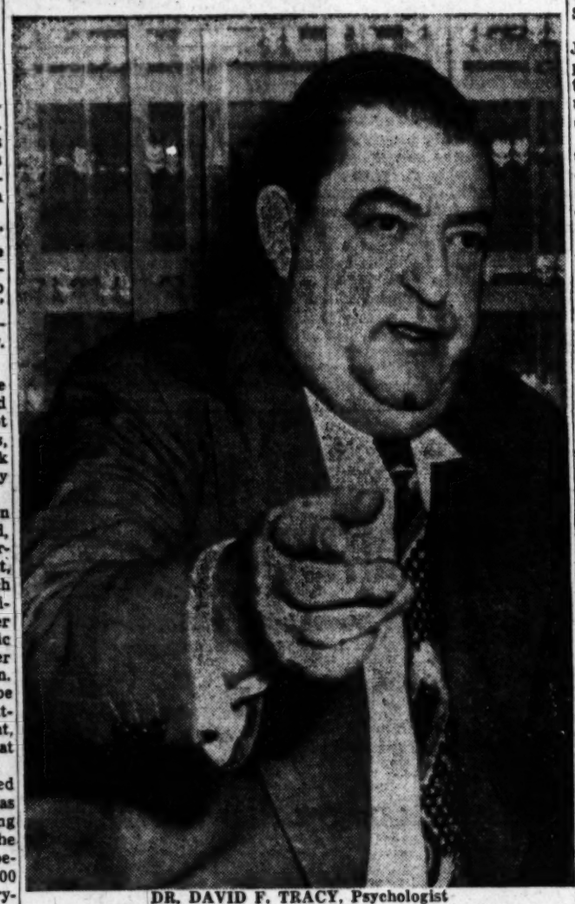

"That's problematical," Dean Stanley said last night. "We have several coaches under consideration, but whether we'll be able to announce our new coach by January 2, I simply don't know."

Florida high school coaches are insisting that a Florida high school coach be appointed or they will refuse to channel their best prospects to the university. The university, however, is believed committed to a plan of hiring a topflight coach, "one who has the ability to put out winning teams," as one Florida official said last night.

This Psychologist Will Put Zip in Brownies Psingles

This is Dr. David F. Tracy, psychologist, hired by the St. Louis Browns to build up the morale and confidence of the seventh-place club. He is described as author, lecturer and specialist in metaphysics.

Next spring during the training period, Dr. Tracy, a New Yorker, will try to teach the Browns "emotional stability," through which he says "they will automatically climb higher in the league race."

Adler Helps Wipe Out W&L Lead

Lexington, Va., Dec. 19—George Washington University's basketball Colonials finished with a burst of offensive power tonight to defeat Washington and Lee, 63-61, in a Southern Conference game here.

Paced by their accurate forward, Johnny Moffatt, who scored 20 points for honors, the G. W. cagers took comand in the final seven minutes after trailing much of the evening.

A week ago tonight in Washington, the Colonials topped the Generals by 83-68. Tonight's win gave George Washington a season's record of four victories and two defeats. W. and L. has won only a single game in six starts.

Tonight's contest saw the lead change hands seven times before Moffatt bagged the winning goal with a minute to play.

George Washington led at the half, 36-33, rallying in the last two minutes of the first period to erase a 6-point W. L. lead.

At the outset of the second half, the Generals staged a scoring spree which netted them 12 points and a 47-43 lead. G. W. matched that at 54-54 with eight minutes left to play.

Moffatt and Ace Adler put the Colonials ahead, 57-54 and, despite the Generals' late rally, won the race up to the final gun.

In Answering Suit

Ruthstrom Owes Them, Redskins Say

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Ralph Ruthstrom's suit against the Washington Redskins for $4100 in back-payment of salary came up in District Court yesterday, and the Redskins promptly countered with a $241.80 claim of their own against their former fullback.

Ruthstrom

Judge David A. Pine turned down a motion by Redskin Attorney Bernard I. Nordlinger for a directed verdict of acquittal, and ordered the case to be resumed this morning at 10 o'clock.

Ruthstrom testified for three hours yesterday. He said that in 1947 the Redskins suspended him, refused to release him, and prevented him from earning a livelihood as a professional football player.

Albert (Turk) Edwards, Redskins' coach in 1947 and now executive vice president, spoke up for the club. He said that Ruthstrom broke his contract several times in 1947, missed practice once, broke training rules and finally "jumped" the club before he finished paying up a $1000 salary advance.

George Marshall, Redskin president, also appeared briefly on the stand, but only to identify a letter sent to his office by Ruthstrom's attorney in connection with the case. Marshall then returned to the side of Redskin Attorney Bernard I. Nordlinger.

Nordlinger said last night that Marshall will be called on again today, along with Assistant Coach Wilbur Moore and Mrs. Rosalie Raley, who is a secretary in the Redskin office.

Nordlinger said that he will again ask for a directed verdict of acquittal today.

Laughlin said last night that he considers the case "an indirect test of football's reserve clause." The clause binds a player to the club holding his contract unless he is released.

Held to Contract

Ruthstrom claims that he wanted to accept an offer from the Buffalo Bills of the All-American Conference, but the Bills wouldn't sign him until he received his Redskin release.

Early in 1948, when Ruthstrom anounced he would ask a court injunction against the Redskins, the team released him. Ruthstrom played for the Bills in '48 and for the Baltimore Colts this year. He is still Colts' property.

Ruthstrom said that two weeks after he left the Redskins in October, 1947, he phoned Marshall from Houston, Tex., and asked for his release. He said that Marshall turned him down.

Then Ruthstrom phoned National Football League Commissioner Bert Bell and asked him to consider his appeal. According to Ruthstrom, Bell said, "I would like to help you, but I must look out for my job, and Marshall is too powerful."

Testifying on the Redskins' relations with Ruthstrom, Edwards said the team first had trouble with the fullback in September, 1947.

Against team rules, Edwards said, Ruthstrom came to dinner in a Chicago hotel wearing a sweater instead of a suit coat. Edwards censured him.

On two occasions a month later, Ruthstrom stayed away from his hotel room all night in violation of the team curfew law, said Edwards. And on still another occasion, Ruthstrom failed to appear at practice.

Ruthstrom was fined $500, said Edwards, "for letting the team and the fans of Washington down." Ruthstrom apologized to the squad, according to Edwards. Later, Ruthstrom left the team without permission and went home to Houston.

Ruthstrom's version of his departure went this way:

Terps Lose Again, 75-71, To Touring Ohio Wesleyan

Ohio Wesleyan opened its five-day tour of the Washington area with a 75-71 victory over Maryland last night at College Park.

The defeat was the seventh in eight starts for the hapless Tarapins who have only beaten Washington & Lee.

As usual, Center Jud Millhon, leading collegiate scorer in Ohio last year, paced the Battling Bishops. He dropped in 11 field goals and 7 free throws for 29 points, 13 more than Lee Brawley, Maryland's high man.

Playing their third game in four days, the Terps managed to stay close to the visitors until shortly before halftime, when Millhon sparked the Bishops to a 36-29 halftime edge.

Led by Brawley and Bob Murray, who scored 12 points, the Terps rallied at the end, but the spurt fell 4 points short.

Dynamite Wins Over Cardenas

Little Dynamite, 129½, of Washington, outpointed Mexico City's Jose Cardenas, 135, in the 10-round feature of last night's boxing card at Turner's Arena.

There was nothing resembling a knockdown, and a couple of short right jolts to the head by Dynamite came closest to resembling a solid punch.

In the preliminaries, Marshall Clayton, 142, New Orleans, earned a 4-round decision over Washington's Charlie Bennett, 145; promising Gene Smith, 124, Washington, won his second straight pro fight with a knockout of Baltimore's Ted Harris, 124, in 2:51 of the first round.

Pete Galiano, 147, Washington, won a TKO over Frankie Ball, D. C., 140, in 2:51 of the third round, and Walter Rowan, 145, Richmond, Va., won over Stonewall Jackson 149½, D. C., in four.

N. C. State Beaten, 54-46

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 19 (AP)—North Carolina State's basketball team blew a 10-point halftime lead tonight and was defeated by Michigan, 54 to 46. It was the first defeat in five starts for the 1948 Southern Conference champions. The two teams play again tomorrow night.

The tall, rugged invaders from the Big Ten stunned a crowd of 9000 after the intermission by controlling the play under both backboards and solving State's defense. State played a steady first half and held Michigan in check. Michigan now has won four of its five games.

Breadon Received Over 4 Million In Sale of Cards

St. Louis, Dec. 19 (AP).—The late Sam Breadon got $4,050,800 for the St. Louis Cardinals when he sold the club to Fred W. Saigh and the late Robert E. Hannegan in November, 1947.

The figure was disclosed today in a suit by the St. Louis Browns to evict the Cardinals from Sportsman's Park here.

Eviction is sought on grounds the Redbirds' lease on the park was broken when the club changed ownership. The Browns own the park.

George W. Simpkins, Redbirds' attorney, said Saigh and Hannegan put up only $60,800 in cash. The remainder of the purchase price, he added, was made up of a three-million-dollar bank loan and $550,000 in short-term loans from Breadon.

A.-A.C Boss Won't Bury League Yet

Coronado, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—The commissioner of the All-America Football Conference said today that if that league was going to die "it would do so in a dignified, business-like fashion."

O. O. Kessing, who ruled the circuit, explained that the business of winding up its affairs, or whatever else was decided upon, would be considered at a meeting next month in New York.

"We're not dead yet," he said, adding that he did not mean by such a statement that the league would be revived.

"I don't know what will happen at the New York meeting," he stated. He said he had no intention of hinting at anything startling in prospect, as he had been reported doing at Houston, Tex., Saturday.

The new National-American League, taking in the American Conference's Cleveland, San Francisco and Baltimore teams, came into official being today.

Kessing said American Conference officials decided at a meeting in Houston last week to postpone consideration of the new state of affairs until the New York meeting.

He declined to speculate on what would happen at the meeting, or to say whether he anticipated there would be an effort to continue the America Conference or to form another league.

"I have always been for two leagues," he said, "but I don't know what's going to happen.

In Philadelphia, Bert Bell, National League commissioner, said plans for the National-American League meeting there January 19 were going ahead.

He declined to comment on Kessing's remarks.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The 1949 World Series movie or "The Life and Triumphs of Joe Page" had its first showing today at a luncheon meeting sponsored by the American and National baseball leagues.

Under the direction of Lew Fonseca of the league's promotional department, some 20,000 feet of film were sliced to 3700 feet in a compact movie that runs 35 minutes.

Page, relief pitcher hero of the New York Yankees' decisive win over Brooklyn, was the star of the picture. Third Baseman Bobby Brown, Yankee batting ace, had second billing.

If Fonseca wasn't showing Page striking out a hitter he was picturing another Brooklyn relief man trudging in from the bullpen. Dodger Rex Barney, thumped in the final game, was a disinterested spectator.

As the '49 series provoked little controversy, the pictures could prove nothing. In the films it did look as though Gene Hermanski might have been safe at home plate when he slid under Gerry Coleman's throw in the second game. Maybe it was the angle.

$25.80 Shot Comes From Last to Win

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 19.—Those who had a hunch and bet a bunch won't have to worry about the winner's circle. In his first outing he was beaten a nose at 53-1 when it appeared he had been fouled out of first money.

He came back at 20-1, took command early and stayed there. His next outing, however, was a dull one, finishing nine lengths behind Rough Ordy and others. Apprentice Nolan Griffith was aboard in this race.

Today High Hunch was ridden by Jimmy McDermott once more. He was off last but the boy never let up on him, circling horses on the outside to gradually get to the front.

In the final drive, he held Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Paintandpowder safe by two lengths. M. I. Brooks' Sunny South was third.

A crowd of 5500 saw the program under weather conditions that smacked more of June than mid-December.

The victory on High Hunch was the second of the day for young McDermott. He won in the second race with a good ride on Principal Joe, owned by J. P. Simpson of Washington, D. C. The 4-year-old paid $6.40 and put the finishing touches on a $66.40 daily double pay-off on the 4 and 4 combination.

As full of good things as Christmas Morning

COME Christmas morn, and certain homes hereabouts are going to know joy as never before.

A beribboned key will pass hands. There'll be a rush outside to inspect a gorgeous creation in gleaming chrome and satiny color.

It will be a shining new Buick—ready to repeat all over again the delights you found opening your Christmas packages.

A thumb's pressure on a door lock will swing open wide and welcoming doors. Big roomy seat cushions, sofa-wide and soft, will invite you to step in for a quick trial.

There'll be an outlook generous as Kriss Kringle's heart, and a wheel that seems to snuggle into a driver's hand.

Someone will say "Let's try it!"—and a big Fireball straight-eight engine of stepped-up power and still higher compression will purr into eager life.

Soft coil springs on each wheel will gentle road-shock, and rigid torque-tube will hold the whole structure steady. That good solid Buick feel and the cushiony grip of super-soft tires on wide safety rims will wash out all sense of bounce and jitter.

And it could be that the simple word, Dynaflow,* will be spelled out on the fender. That will mean a brand-new sensation for the whole family—the luxurious sensation of utter smoothness and blissful driving ease.

A Merry Christmas? It certainly will be for new Buick-owning homes.

For with all its gleaming beauty, this Buick need not bring New Year's budget headaches, since prices spread-eagle every price range above the very lowest.

It may be a bit late for getting a new Buick to your house by Christmas morning. But it's not too late to see your Buick dealer—and make your gift to the family the news that a Buick will soon be yours.

*Dynaflow Drive is standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Bogley Rated Top Junior

Bill Benning Says

At Charles Town.

Dear Folks:

Apprentice Jockey Herman an 18-year-old Washington, D. C., boy rode the first winner of his career on the Monday program. Amos, who also rides motorcycles, won't forget his victory on H. L. Townsley's Sidell, for he fell off after the finish line. However, he hopped to his feet and ran back to the winner's circle in time to remount and have his picture taken. He is under contract to Russell Downes, who bought the youth's papers from Earl K. Auld, the Washington trainer. Frank Gall, trainer for Justin Funkhouser, reports Noble Impulse is doing well on the nearby O'Sullivan farm. The 3-year-old, purchased in a Pimlico auction, should be ready for a comeback next summer, Gall says.—BILL.

Howard Faces W. Va. State

Howard University's Bisons tackle the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association's basketball champions from West Virginia State at 8:15 tonight at Turner's Arena.

In a 7 p. m. preliminary, Cardozo High plays Douglass High of Upper Marlboro.

Two former Washington area high school athletes will be in the West Virginia lineup. Greeky Watson, former Armstrong High boy, considered one of the greatest Negro Interhigh League products, will start against Howard.

And so will 6-foot, 6-inch Earl Earl Lloyd, former Parker-Gray of Alexandria forward, who is averaging 14 points per game.

West Virginia State has a 3-1 record this season, compared to 4-1 for Howard. Two of Howard's victories were at the expense of Fort Belvoir. Delaware State whipped the Bisons, 59-49, for their only loss. Frank Booth, 6-foot, 3-inch Bison center, scored 19 points in that game.

D. C. Tennis Star Shares In Doubles

New York, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Gilbert Bogley, National Junior champion from Chevy Chase, Md., headed the list of 1949 junior stars announced today by the ranking committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The 18-year-old Bogley topped rankings, which will be submitted for official approval at the U. S. L. T. A. meeting here on January 21, for the second straight year. Approval usually is automatic.

Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., who moved into the junior division in 1949 after leading the boys' singles rankings last year, was runner-up to Bogley. Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., was listed third, followed by Jerry DeWitts of Oakland, Calif., and Ernest Debray of San Francisco.

The others in the top 10 were Jack Turpin of Dallas, Tex., sixth; Charles Hickox of Berkeley, Calif., seventh; Julian Oates of Waco, Tex., eighth; Keston Deimling of River Forest, Ill., ninth, and Richard Squires of Bronxville, N. Y., tenth.

Bogley and Squires topped the junior doubles rankings. DeWitts and Ernest Debray won second place, followed by Reed and Hickox. Jacque Grigry of Alhambra, Calif., and Reynolds McCabe of Lamesa, Calif., were fourth, while Turpin and Alan Fischl of Long Island City, N. Y., were fifth.

Jack Frost, 15-year-old Monterey, Calif., youth who had a hot season, was ranked first in the boys' singles division. Frost, who placed fourth in 1948, was followed by Al Kuhn of Evanston, Ill., who jumped from eleventh to second.

Maureen Connolly, 15-year-old San Diego, Calif., youngster who was unranked in 1948, headed the girls' singles division. Laura Lou Jahn of Palm Desert, Calif., who was second last year, again rated the runner-up spot.

he phoned his brother in Houston, and was told that his mother was seriously ill with a heart and arthritic condition.

He didn't have time to get permission to leave, but asked a friend, Ray Pearman, to explain to the Redskin management for him.

Ruthstrom said that when he called from Houston to explain to Marshall, he was told that he was indefinitely suspended. Ruthstrom said he never was given written notice of suspension.

Ruthstrom said he considered his suspension a termination of his contract. The contract said, "The club shall have the right to terminate this contract upon written notice to the player . . ."

According to Nordlinger, Ruthstrom's 1947 contract called for a salary of $5500. Including the $1000 salary advance, which Ruthstrom acknowledges, he received about $1400. Then he was suspended. Ruthstrom wants the rest of the $5500.

The Redskins claim they were deducting the $1000 advance in chunks out of each week's paycheck. But they claim Ruthstrom hadn't paid up $241.80 of salary advance when he was suspended. The Redskins are not entering a claim for the $500 which Ruthstrom was fined.

Budget Bureau Studies Shift of Civil Functions Of Army Engineer Corps

The Budget Bureau is making studies to determine whether:

The river and other civil functions of the Army's Engineer Corps should be transferred to the Interior Department and be merged with its Reclamation Bureau, and whether Interior's Bureau of Land Management should be transferred to the Agriculture Department.

Both shifts were recommended by the Hoover commission. There is a real possibility that the President will indorse them.

Meantime, Interior-Agriculture relationships are being studied. Agriculture Secretary Brannan and Interior Secretary Chapman have had several conferences on the subject. The Cabinet members grew up together in Denver and they are close friends. They are confident of reaching a satisfactory solution to the problem that has plagued their predecessors.

Secretary Chapman, it was learned, has agreed to seek the views of the Agriculture Department on Interior projects where land and food production is involved. He will retain the right to make final decisions on them.

The Reclamation Bureau got itself in deep trouble with the President, the Budget Bureau and Agriculture in recent months for pushing programs in Congress without clearing them in advance. One of the bills vetoed by the President would have had the Government take over an irrigation project in New Mexico—a bill guided through Congress by Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.), the former Agriculture Secretary. Anderson was upset by the veto.

STORY: A Pennsylvania woman has written the Civil Service to apply for a position as "censure" taker. Considering all the brickbats tossed at Government, perhaps she has something there.

CAPITOL HILL: The Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee is slated for a reorganization. It is now made up of seven Democrats and six Republicans. Chairman Johnston (D., S. C.) plans to ask that it be composed of eight Democrats and five Republicans.

If his plan is approved, either Senator Lehman (D., N. Y.) or Senator Benton (D., Conn.) will be added to the Democratic side, and Senator Darby (R., Kans.) will go to the GOP side. There are now three Republican vacancies on the committee. Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) has resigned, and Senators Dulles (R., N. Y.) and Baldwin (R., Conn.) will not be members of the next session of Congress.

VA: These employes of the Veterans' Administration here have been given cash awards for economy suggestions: Thomas H. Babb, Robert H. Cain, Delia S. Danzig, Asa B. Dorsey, Florence A. Hammerman, Robert L. Nichols, Louise V. Smarr, Rose A. Sotter and Robert Urban.

COMERS: Seventeen young Federal workers have been selected for Civil Service's first junior management intern program. The program is aimed toward the development of managerial talent in Federal agencies. The American University will grant fellowships (Dunham-Dever awards in public administration) to the employes. Those selected and their agencies follow.

William B. Rutherford and J. Hall Simpson, Army; James W. Moore and Constance E. Perry, Civil Service; James F. Appleby, Robert W. Clark and Robert Velthuis, Commerce; Howard Farkas, Federal Security; Patricia R. Stoneman, Defense; Shephard A. Magidson, Treasury; Harold K. Johnson, VA; John F. Elwyn, John M. Eustace, Arthur D. Federman, Paul L. Keller, Henry A. Levy and Erwin E. Shalowitz.

JOB NOTES: Seven out of every eight Federal workers in this country now have regular Civil Service status. During the war the ratio was only one of three. War service and temporary employes must still qualify in competitive tests or be replaced. . . . More than 5200 physically disabled employes were hired by Uncle Sam during the first 10 months of this year, or one for every 83 hired. About 3300 were disabled veterans. Through Civil Service's San Francisco office, five totally blind persons and four amputees were among the disabled who were hired . . . Examinations for physical science aid ($2200 to $3825) and photographic interpretation instructor ($3100 to $7600) have been announced by the Potomac River Naval Command. Get details in Building 37 of the Naval Research Laboratory here.

37 Teachers Lack Raise Requirements

Corning Explains School Board Plan For Pay Increases

All but 1 percent of the District's nearly 3000 teachers last year met qualifications that would entitle them to pay raises, Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning yesterday told a committee of teachers.

The school head met with the 45 members of the salary promotion criteria committee to explain a plan recently approved by the Board of Education setting up requirements a teacher must meet to be entitled to a raise.

The 1947 Teachers Salary Act said the teachers must prove professional progress to be eligible for raises at 5, 10 and 15-year intervals.

Dr. Corning met with the committee after members charged that he had ignored their recommendations in drawing up the program.

Committee members had expressed a fear few teachers would qualify under the Corning plan, which is retroactive to 1947.

The school head said the 37 teachers who failed to meet the standards will be notified and that they will be able to make up their deficiencies.

Committee members sought the superintendent's permission to circulate the report they prepared and they claim was ignored.

Corning said it would be confusing to have two programs presented and suggested the committee prepare amendments to the program already approved. He promised to meet with the committee next fall to discus modifications

Clerk Pleads Self-Defense In Slaying

Curtis H. Shoemaker, 41-year-old Times-Herald credit clerk, killed Francis K. Arnold, truck driver, in self-defense, after the latter beat and threatened to kill him, Shoemaker told a District Court jury yesterday.

Trial of the clerk on first-degree murder charges opened yesterday before Federal Judge Richmond B. Keech and a jury of nine women and three men. Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin is prosecuting. Harry Ahern and William E. McCollam are defense counsels.

Arnold was fatally shot last July 16 in front of Shoemaker's apartment at 2520 14th st. nw. following an argument over a woman.

The defendant testified that Arnold and the woman, Mrs. Irene P. Shaffran, 43, a widow, of 2606 University pl. nw., had accompanied him to his apartment after a visit to a taproom.

Shoemaker testified that a few minutes after the couple had left he went downstairs where the defendant declared Arnold grabbed him by the throat and struck him. He said he then ran for the door with Arnold in pursuit.

He said Arnold shouted "I'll kill you" and made a gesture toward his hip pocket.

At this point, Shoemaker said, in fear of his life, he wheeled, drew a pistol from his pocket and fired.

He said he had taken the gun from a drawer before he went downstairs because he was afraid of Arnold who he said had threatened him during the evening.

Man Found On Store's Roof Freed

Wesley F. Richardson, arrested Sunday on the roof of Jelleff's, Inc., F st. near 12th nw., was freed yesterday on the second floor of Municipal Court, at 5th and F sts. nw.

Charges of destroying private property were nolle prossed against Richardson after he convinced Judge Armond D. Scott and Assistant United States Attorney Martin McNamara that he was up to no evil on the roof.

Richardson, a laborer at Jelleff's who has been ill at his home, 603 S st. nw., for two months, testified he went to the store Saturday to borrow money from a friend who worked in a paint locker on Jelleff's roof.

Couldn't Find Friend

Richardson said he got on the roof all right, but could not find his friend. When he tried to come down the roof door was locked, he said. No one answered his pounding.

Richardson said he spent Saturday night asleep in the paint locker. He told Judge Scott the cold rains of Sunday started creeping into his bones. He said he became hungry.

He knocked out the door glass trying to get out. This set off the burglar alarm. Police found him on the roof hiding under a water tank.

Story Corroborated

Richardson's story was corroborated by Thomas Hall, assistant controller of Jelleff's, who said he had talked to the defendant immediately after the arrest.

Richardson told the judge he would never "do anything against the store, because he had been treated so well during his illness."

Hall said the store was not interested in prosecuting.

Judge Scott said "his story is as reasonable as any I've heard."

McNamara said he would nolle prosse the case.

Big Truck Topples Store's Marquee To the Sidewalk

Lansburgh's department store was stripped of the marquee over its entrance in the 400 block of 7th st. nw. yesterday when a truck bumped against the structure.

Few shoppers were on the street about 8:30 a. m. when, police said, a tractor trailer truck driven by Worley F. Arnold, 31, of 43 Seaton pl. nw., was parking at the curb.

The upper part of the truck struck the all-steel marquee and down it cam The marquee measured about 15 by 15 feet. Store officials ordered it removed and estimated damage at $5000.

2 Men Admit Gaming, Each Fined $750

Prince Georges Judge Suspends Jail Terms; Fay Drops Case Against Floratos

Two men who pleaded guilty to gaming charges were fined $750 each and given suspended six-month sentences in police court at Upper Marlboro, Md., yesterday.

The defendants were John Hathaway Fish, 40, of 2117 4th st. nw., and Vincent Briguglio, 34, of 827 49th ave., Capitol Heights, Md.

Tried before Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie, they pleaded guilty to operating and maintaining a gaming table.

They were arrested December 12 when six Prince Georges County policemen, led by Lieut. Elon A. Turner, raided a bungalow at 5201 R st., Coral Hills, Md.

Storekeeper, Woman Held on Gaming Charge

Donald L. Washington, 28, and Sarah Gladden, 43, were arrested by vice squad detectives yesterday and charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

The arrests were made in the Music Shack, a music store at 313 M st. nw., owned by Washington.

The detectives said they first saw the woman about 3 p. m. in the 300 block of M st. nw. They said she was carrying slips of paper and money in her hand.

They said they followed her into the store and saw her pass the slips and money to Washington, who deposited them in two paper bags on the counter.

The detectives said Washington told them he was getting ready to "turn in" the money and slips. One of the bags contained a quantity of numbers slips, police said, and the other about $150 in cash.

The woman gave police her address as 4615 Clay st. ne.

They were released in $1500 bond each and will be arraigned today in Municipal Court.

Restaurateur Cleared Of Gambling Charge

The numbers case against Nicholas Floratos, one of the 36 men indicted by the special gambling grand jury, was dismissed in District Court yesterday at the Government's request.

The dismissal came six weeks after Judge Edward A. Tamm quashed the search warrant, and evidence seized thereunder on March 25, when marshals raided the Macedonia Coffee House, 746 9th st. nw., operated by Floratos.

The search warrant was quashed by Judge Tamm because it was supported by an affidavit which charged violation of the lottery laws in December, 1948, more than 100 days before the raid.

U. S. Now Has No Evidence

Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin told Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday that as a result of Judge Tamm's ruling the Government now had no evidence against Floratos, 59, of 1020 9th st. nw.

Floratos was charged with promoting a numbers lottery from December, 1948, through March, 1949. He also was charged with permitting gaming, in that on December 10, 1948, he sold a numbers ticket to Pasquale Sanducci, a New York Justice Department employe who served as an undercover agent for United States Attorney George Morris Fay in his campaign against gambling. The case was in District Court nine times before it was dismissed yesterday.

Of the 12 cases made by the special gambling grand jury, six have now been disposed of. In two other cases charges were dropped for lack of evidence. In one case charges were dropped because one defendant was convicted on gambling charges in Virginia, and the other defendant committed suicide.

In another case, one defendant was found innocent, and the other defendant guilty, but remains unsentenced.

And Attilio Acalotti, who faces three separate gambling trials as a result of gambling grand jury indictments, was found guilty December 13 of threatening the grand jury's key witness, his former girl friend, Bernice Franklin. Acalotti was sentenced to serve from 8 months to 2 years and was jailed pending his appeal.

The case against William "Snags" Lewis and 13 others ended in a hung jury November 26. They will be retried February 2. Five cases are scheduled for trial January 9, 12, 23, 30 and February 27.

Court Asked To Dismiss Deputy's Suit

Marshal's Aide Asked $75,000 After Getting 'Involuntary Leave'

The Government yesterday asked District Court to dismiss the $75,000 suit brought by Field Deputy Marshal Donald H. Foster, who gave evidence for a defendant in a recent gaming conspiracy trial.

In the action to dismiss, the court was told Justice Department authorities were within their rights in forcing Foster to take paid annual leave.

Foster, a marshal for 15 years, was called by the defense in the William (Snags) Lewis gaming plot trial which resulted in a mistrial because the jury could not reach agreement.

Foster contradicted testimony given by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly as to the admission of a defendant.

The suit was brought against United States Attorney George Fay, United States Marshal Bruce Matthews and Salvatore Andretta, supervisor of United States marshals. The defendants deny Foster is suspended but say an investigation has been ordered.

In urging dismissal, the defendants said:

"The potential jeopardy to the public interest far outweighs any possible injury to plaintiff (Foster). The marshal has no peremptory duty to give assignments to a deputy for whose trustworthiness he may need reassurance."

Falls Church School Loan Authorized

The Falls Church City Council, at a special meeting last night, authorized the Falls Church School Board to borrow part of the $700,000 loan authorized by the voters November 20.

City Attorney LaRue Van Meter told the council that the loan may come either from the State Literary Fund or the State Teachers Retirement Fund.

Both sources, Van Meter said, have a 3 percent interest rate on loans repayable within 30 years.

The council decided that if the school board cannot obtain the funds it needs through either source, it will float bonds.

No mention was made at the meeting of the exact sum the school board would seek from State funds.

The school loan was proposed to provide a 120-pupil primary school and a 500-pupil junior-senior high school. A 25-acre site at Leesburg pike and Haycock rd. was purchased for the high school December 8.

In another action, City Manager Roy F. Dunn was instructed to negotiate for land to widen Tinner st.

All a Mistake

Heat Is Off In Firemen's Flamin' Fuss

That burning dispute between the Oxon Hill Fire Department volunteers and the District Fire Department (professionals) simmered down yesterday into an exchange of "explanations."

Both sides, after a morning conference, announced it was all a mistake conceived in the heat of the moment last Friday night at a house fire at 4410 Wheeler rd., Oxon Hill.

The Oxon Hill volunteers, headed by Chief Charles H. Arnold, were summoned first. About a half-hour later, the District professionals—Third Battalion Chief C. K. Bunn in charge—arrived in response to a box alarm turned in just inside the District line, two blocks away.

Opinions Differ

The Oxon Hill department claimed the fire was under control, and what in the name of a fire extinguisher were the District boys fussing over?

Chief Arnold disagreed, and complained to District Chief Engineer Joseph A. Mayhew.

Yesterday Arnold met with District Acting Chief Engineer P. A. Davis.

"No Ill Feeling"

Said Davis: "We consider the matter ended right here. There is no ill feeling between departments."

Said Arnold: "I am sure that Chief Bunn's attitude was caused by an earnest desire to extinguish the fire rather than usurp the authority of the Oxon Hill Fire Department, in whose jurisdiction this fire occurred."

3 Freed in Theft; 'Victim' Held on Perjury Charge

Judge Matthew F. McGuire yesterday dismissed a robbery charge brought against three youths and committed the complaining witness for alleged perjury.

The District Court dismissal was ordered as to Casper D. Gregory, 22, of 1309 13th st. nw., Richard Gregory, 20, of Ft. Bragg, N. C., and Robert R. Fowler, 21, no address given.

They were charged with robbing Miss Lucille Savage, 29, of 412½ M st. nw., of $31 in a purse.

She denied yesterday under cross-examination that she had ever been arrested. However, defense attorney M. Edward Buckley, jr., produced another witness who testified she had been in Occoquan with Miss Savage 10 years ago.

Man, 70, Hit By Cab, Both Legs Broken

In Serious Condition; Attorney Is Injured In Two-Car Collision

Harry P. Stevenson, 70, was in serious condition at Garfield Hospital last night after being struck by a taxicab at 14th and Crittenden sts. nw.

The hospital said both of his legs were broken and he suffered head injuries.

Police said Stevenson, who lives at 5000 14th st. nw., was crossing 14th st. about 7 p. m. when the cab, southbound on 14th st., hit him.

The cab driver, Killis T. Houston, 31, of 1000 8th st. nw., was charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian. He was released in $100 bond.

Lawyer Denny Hughes, 56, of 2480 16th st. nw, was involved in a two-car crash at 6:25 p. m. at Upshur st. and Illinois ave. nw.

Police said Hughes was driving east on Upshur st. and his car was in a collision with a car being driven north on Illinos ave. by Raymod J. Kyber, 24, of 9603 Page ave., Bethesda, Md.

Hughes was treated for hand cuts by a private physician. Police estimated damage to Hughes' car at $300, and damage to Kyber's car at $250. A hearing on the accident will be held January 9 in the Corporation Counsel's office.

Arrested Man Cleared In Clay Killing

Questioning of Vance Oswald, 24, brought forth, nothing which would connect him with the hold-up-killing of Winston C. Clay, Prince Georges County police said yesterday.

However, police said, Oswald admitted the holdup of a cab driver, Willie T. Lewis, of 1433 New Jersey ave. nw., Saturday night in Landover, Md.

The slaying about which Oswald was questioned took place December 6, in a Berwyn filling station. Clay, 18, the station attendant, was found shot to death.

According to police, Oswald, who lives in Carmody Hills, Md., entered the cab Saturday night at 12th st. and New York ave. nw., was driven to Landover and there held up the driver and robbed him of $9 and his cab.

Oswald was picked up early Sunday morning by Sergt. C. C. Zumbrun of the Maryland State Police.

Two Held in Theft; Beer Haul Recovered

Beer, 32 cases of it, flowed like wine out of the Gunther Brewing Co. warehouse at 4801 Central ave., Capitol Heights, Md., Sunday night.

And the morning after had a kick like a mule for George Thomas Brent, 19, of 328 48th ave., and Thomas Carl Stanton, 20, of 6108 B st., both of Capitol Heights, when police called and charged them with breaking and entering.

Police said the pair admitted breaking a window and carting off the brew in a toy wagon. Each was held under $300 bond for a hearing in Upper Marlboro Police Court Friday.

Kefauver Sees Quick Action on Home Rule

'This Is Your Time' For House Approval, Young Democrats Told by Senator

For other home rule story, see Page B-9.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) yesterday told a group of Washington Young Democrats "this is your time" to get House approval of District home rule.

Kefauver led the drive that brought Senate approval early this year for his Washington home rule bill.

This bill, now tabled in the House District Committee, is the target of a discharge petition to bring the measure to a House vote. Signatures of 218 House members, a majority, would force the bill out of the District Committee and subject it to a vote of the whole House.

"I think you'll get a discharge petition (signed) if you go after it," Kefauver told the 16-member Young Democrats delegation in a meeting in the Senate District Committee room.

Campaign Plans

He met with the group at its request to discuss what the organization can do to help win passage of the home rule bill. The group was headed by William Fadler, jr., Washington attorney and head of the organization's home rule committee.

In predicting that enough signatures can be placed on the discharge petition to force action on the home rule bill, Kefauver pointed out that both political parties have indorsed the idea of District self-government and that the President favors it. He said a majority of the people here are for it.

"I think you've never had a better time to get the bill passed," he said. "This is your time."

Opposition Cited

Kefauver cited Board of Trade opposition to the home rule legislation, and commented the organization's attitude "is inconceivable to me. Many members of Congress wonder how well the organization is representing the District."

He described as "loaded" the questionnaire the Board of Trade sent to its members to get their views on home rule.

He said, too, that District officials have used indirect ways of pouring cold water on the idea of home rule. He said he recalled that District Commissioner John Russell Young had given "yes, but . . ." answers when asked about his views on home rule by Senate members.

Answering a question, Kefauver said it was clear some District officials would suffer political damage from home rule "unless they could get the people to elect them."

Repercussions Seen

Kefauver said he believes the Senate-approved home rule bill is a good measure, but would not object to amendments. He said he felt approval of home rule for the District or failure of the measure to pass "will have important repercussions in American foreign policy."

In the struggle between communism and democracy, he said, there are still many people "in the twilight zone" with still the choice to make. He said passage of the home rule plan for the Nation's Capital would be "a great boost to those who might join us in the democratic cause. It would be a substantial enlargement of American democracy."

He said that during a recent three-week trip abroad "many people asked me why the residents of the American Capital do not have their democratic right to vote—it's a hard question to answer."

He said he did not think the District will get representation in Congress, which he favors, until it has had municipal self-government.

Throughout his 10 years in the House, Kefauver said, he had the impression that if District home rule ever came to a vote it would be approved.

When Husband Gets Divorce

'Impelling Factors' Govern Alimony Awards, Judge Rules

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday cited "certain impelling factors" which govern the award of alimony when the husband obtains the divorce.

This clarification of District divorce laws came in opinions written by Judge David L. Bazelon on appeals against two District Court awards of alimony. In both cases, the husbands' grounds for their decrees were desertion.

Judge Bazelon upheld payments of $65 a month to Agnes Shulz of 1800 Jackson st. ne., by her divorced husband, Joseph R. Schulz, a postal employe, of 532 12th st. ne. But in the case of Benjamin H. Quarles, a pharmacist of 1815 1st st. nw., and his divorced wife, Gladys M. Quarles, of 3638 Park rd. nw., the court overruled the award of $30 monthly alimony.

The opinions said that although District statutes permit alimony to wives divorced by their husbands, certain "impelling factors" affect such awards. Among the factors have been:

"The duration of the marriage; the number and age of the children; the age and health of the parties; their respective economic conditions—both present and prospective; the wife's contribution to the accumulation of the husband's property; the circumstances under which the decree was granted; the effect, if any, upon the family; and the interest of society generally to prevent a person, wherever possible, from becoming a public charge."

Citing this, the judge reversed the District Court alimony award to Mrs. Quarles because "no loss, either financial or by way of security or status, was lost by her."

Judge Bazelon's opinion upheld the Schulz alimony because of such factors that she had been married 30 years, had five children and has a "diminished" chance of making enough money "to meet even mimimal housing and other needs."

Phone Firm Figures Off, Witness Says

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP).—A State witness testified today that the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore calculates incorrectly the value of its property and the return on its investment.

E. Edward McLean, chief auditor of the Maryland Public Service Commission, made his statements during a commission hearing on higher rates.

The company wants permanent rates that would increase telephone bills throughout Maryland by about $2,000,000 a year. Since last March it has collected temporary increases at the rate of about $4,000,000 a year, bringing the total increase asked to about $6,000,000.

Under State law, the company is entitled to earn a fair return on its investment, or rate base. Between 5 and 6 percent is generally considered a fair return.

McLean said the company shows its rate base larger than it should be. It does this, he declared, by failing to take into consideration the length of time that additions to its facilities have been in service.

In computing its rate of return, he testified, the company figures in an allowance for working capital. The company has shown a $2,303,981 allowance for working capital in its exhibits asking for the increases.

McLean estimated that $1,451,247 was enough for this item and suggested that there is some reason for not allowing any. This, he said, is because the company usually receives revenue for its services before its expenses come due.

By McLean's calculations, the company has been earning 5.13 percent on the rate base it espouses and 5.44 percent on the rate base as he figures it. If the permanent rates are granted, he said, the return would go up to 6.5 percent even on the company's own base.

Clarence M. Miles, attorney for the company, protested to the commission during McLean's testimony that the commission has never denied a working capital allowance in the rate base.

Other witnesses are to be heard this week.

Three views of how much local telephone rates should be raised on the average—6, 8.75 or 13 percent—were still before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday as the experts behind each failed to retreat.

In an all-day hearing in the District Building, cross-examination of David A. Kosh, chief of the Public Utilities Division in Federal Supply Service, and V. A. McElfresh, chief accountant of the Public Utilities Division, was completed.

Kosh, testifying on behalf of the Federal Government, largest customer of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., has recommended a 6 percent average rate boost and McElfresh is for an 8.75 percent rise.

Continues Wednesday.

The third view, calling for a 13 percent hike, was supported by Donald K. Belcher, treasurer of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which owns the C. & P. He will be cross-examined Wednesday at 10 a. m. when the hearing on the rate increase resumes in the District Building.

Belcher scored both Kosh and McElfresh's views, but concentrated most of his fire on Kosh. He said Kosh's calculations placed "far too much reliance on a mathematical formula," calling this a poor substitute for sound business experience.

He opposed the Federal view that the local company was in an excellent position in terms of stability and potential customers by declaring its earnings were less stable than those of the Bell System.

Kosh continued his argument that C & P subscribers were entitled to the lowest possible cost of capital—whether attained directly or through A. T. & T.

McElfresh proposed increasing the company's return on its 70 million-dollar-rate base from the current 4.76 percent to 6 percent. This would result in an increase of 8.75 percent in tariffs for customers.

He said his computations indicated that the "cost of money" was 5.839 percent and that he had rounded this to 6 percent in keeping with Supreme Court decisions ruling that the rate of return should be above bare capital costs.

Man, 62, Gets Suspended Term In Fund Misuse

An Arlington man who admittedly made a false robbery report to hide his misuse of a fraternal organization's funds was given a 30-day suspended jail term in Arlington County Court yesterday.

Maurice Holmes, 62, 1705 S. 14th st., reported on December 10 he had been robbed of $1000, which he said he had just drawn from a bank, police said. Investigation disclosed that he had only $300 in the bank at the time. On questioning, he admitted he reported the robbery because he had dissipated about $700 he had collected for the fraternal organization, of which he was treasurer.

Judge Hugh Reid said he suspended the jail sentence because of the defendant's age and the fact his wife had made restitution for the missing $700. The conviction was the first on record in the Arlington court since passage of a State bill earlier this year, providing for prosecution of persons filing false information with police.

Yuletide! . . . Christmas! . . . the glorious season of rejoicing . . . of reunions . . . of specially prepared dinners.

Hollywood Bread lends distinctive grace to these memorable occasions. Poultry stuffings made with Hollywood Bread are truly superb. Try Eleanor Day's famous Christmas Dressing recipe.

Melt in a frying pan, two or three tablespoons of fat; add one tablespoon chopped onion, and saute until tender. Add one cup Hollywood Bread crumbs, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one-half teaspoon each of sage, chopped celery, and parsley . . . and mix well.

Add one egg, slightly beaten, and mix well.

Chopped walnuts, chestnuts or mushrooms may also be added.

This makes a loose, savory, light poultry stuffing.

Hollywood Bread is baked without shortening. Buy a loaf, today!

SOMETHING new in receiving lines was dreamed up by Comdr. William Huggins at his reception Sunday for United States Treasurer Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark. The "line" started conventionally enough with the host, Mrs. Clark and a couple of pals. Then, as early-birds arrived, after shaking hands, they were added to the line until it snaked, conga-like into a second room. It was great fun while it lasted and a fine way to meet an assortment of new characters.

Mrs. Clark is a great improvement over all former Treasurers, if only because she is feminine and decorative. It makes us feel our country's on the up-and-up to see the lady whose name's on the new dollar bills, decked with orchids, diamond clips and a pretty ankle-length frock instead of the usual dreary masculine coat-and-pants ensemble.

One of the few men in Washington with the slightest trace of sartorial verve was also at the party. He's Tom Blake, who indulges in that mysterious trade called "public relations"—for the International Telephone & Telegraph Co. Mr. Blake, who has sloughed off some 50 pounds in a year, wore one of his giddier outfits, created specially as an embodiment of the Yule spirit. It consisted of a more or less conventional suit, a pale yellow shirt, a green tie figured in red—and a cherry red corduroy vest! A green handkerchief peeked from the Blake pocket.

Other, though less sensational, iconoclast is Peter Casson, private secretary to Britain's Ambassador, Sir Oliver Franks. Weekdays, Mr. C. is very Saville Row, whereas some Sundays he's very Tyrolean in brown corduroy trousers, green ditto shooting jacket with bone buttons fashioned from stag horn.

If only there were a few Conde Nasts, a few Lord Castlerosses, to bring cheer. The famous magazine publisher owned and constantly wore claret and peacock blue dinner jacket and trousers. Lord Castlerosse skipped about his evening journalistic round in red-heeled, buckled pumps, his barrel-torso restrained by silver-buttoned reefers.

He Lived—To Be Hanged

THOSE INTERESTED in such horrid happenings were surprised when Traicho Kostov's execution was exacted almost immediately after sentence. Kostov, former Bulgarian vice premier and old-time brutal Bolshevik, was the only Communist on record for more than a decade who, during his purge-trial, refused to grovel in abject confession. Instead he actually defied the court and denied all imaginary conspiracy.

But Kostov was a hot potato and his Sofia gaolers were scared he'd take a powder again. Back in 1924, when communism was illegal in Bulgaria, he was arrested in a Red round-up and temporarily kept for questioning on the fourth floor of police headquarters.

Knowing the ensuing inquisition would end in a spot of torturing, and rather than risk "talking," he jumped out the window to the street four floors below—and lived to be hung 25 years later!

In 1942 he and six comrades were sentenced to death. The six comrades got the gun, literally speaking. But Kostov somehow managed to have his sentence commuted to life imprisonment. The Communists never understood this bit of luck and made the omission one of the main reasons for hanging him seven years afterward.

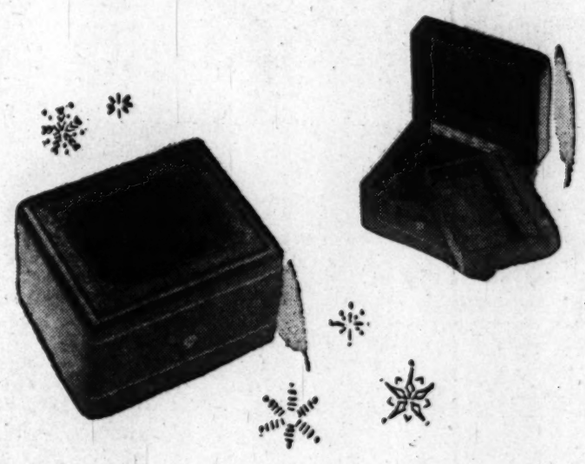

Next on the Bulgar purging list is the richly inventive former Bulgarian Secretary of the Intrior Yugov. Comrade Y., at one time, kept 20 to 50 thousand refractionaries against the party in line—in "Re-Education Camps." About 70 percent died getting educated by the Yugov method.

Quite a Natural Reaction!

HAVE YOU heard the latest (authentic) gag going the rounds—whooping through the most genteel circles, too? It's a Veep joke, naturally, and goes like this:

"How did Jane Hadley react when the Vice President proposed? To find the answer, just dial Dupont 9949!"

For those who, at this time of the holiday season, haven't the strength to dial an extra number, we'll oblige. For some reason unknown to us there's no answer to this particular combination, but dialing it produces the queerest noise . . . not a busy or out-of-order signal, but an enthusiastic wheeeeeeeeeeeeeeee! Try it and see!

MISS ANNE LEGARE

Miss Anne Legare Makes Bow

MISS ANNE LEGARE, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Legare, was introduced to her parents' friends at a tea yesterday. On Thursday, December 29, Mr. and Mrs. Legare will give a dance for young people at the Sulgrave Club.

Standing with her mother yesterday to welcome the guests, Miss Legare wore a soft French blue taffeta frock and held a cluster of gardenias in her hand. Mrs. Legare's gown was gun metal crepe.

At the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Alex Legare, Mrs. Edward Reed, Mrs. Tinsley Garnett and Mrs. Loring Christie.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Grosner were hosts at a cocktail supper last evening at their apartment in the Shoreham. They have as their guest, Mrs. Grosner's sister, Mrs. Louis Garfield of Columbus, Ohio.

'Old Washington' Takes Over at Party For Willmott Lewis, Jr. and Bride

By Marie McNair

YOUNG WILLMOTT LEWIS and his bride—she was Suzanne Alexander—had a sort of second wedding reception yesterday—this time with the parents of the bridegroom as hosts.

Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis invited their friends and a good many young people to meet the newly married pair who flew to Bermuda after their marriage in September and are now settled in a little house in Georgetown.

"How nice to see 'old Washington' around," someone said as they looked through the rooms of the Lewis' big house on Prospect ave., saw old friends at every turn. Yes, it was a Washington party, for Sir Wilmott was for many years correspondent for the London Times, and to Lady Lewis Washington has always been home.

Sir Willmott roamed around during the afternoon, leaving Lady Lewis and the young folk in the drawing room to welcome guests. Lady Lewis, in rustling black taffeta, wore white orchids at her shoulder and her pretty daughter-in-law had pinned orchids at the neckline of her amethyst-colored frock.

Mrs. Samuel Alexander, mother of the bride, was there, and Dr. Alexander, too, and Mrs. Alexander, wearing deep blue taffeta with a tiny feather hat in almond green on her blond hair.

Welcome Back for Biffles

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, was going home to wrap almost a hundred Christmas packages for her friends. Leslie Biffle was about the most popular guest at the party, getting a real welcome back after a siege at the Mayo Clinic with bursitis and a holiday with Glade Biffle at the new Caribbe Hotel in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Mrs. Gordon Young, there with the General, was wearing a Paris hat of white felt with a feather and a French necklace of huge mother of pearl shells with earrings to match. She's expecting her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Price, to arrive on Saturday from New York, with their daughter, Jean, who'll stay through Wednesday for some of the holiday parties.

Christmas Candle Glows

The Dominican Ambassador, Luis de Thomen, was accompanied by Senora de Thomen and his sister, Senora Calvente. I saw Mrs. Borden Harriman holding her own court in the dining room, where Mrs. Ludlow King presided at a Christmasy tea table with a tall red taper burning in a nest of greens. Gen. Omar Bradley and Mrs. Bradley, Gen. and Mrs. U. S. Grant 3d were there, and Mrs. Mason Gulick who introduced me to Lady Lewis' tall, blond granddaughter Jan King, who's inherited all her grandmother's beauty.

Then, there were Gen. and Mrs. A. C. McAuliffe; Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Under Secretary of State; and Mrs. Edward H. Foley, wife of the Under Secretary of the Treasury; the Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffmann; Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, a little round white hat topping her black costume; Mrs. Parker West, getting congratulations from all sides for her party on Sunday; and Mrs. Albert J. Bowley, who told me about the films of New Zealand which had been shown at her house by Col. John Howard, with Harold Coolidge as the lecturer.

Venezuelan Foreign Minister Feted

THE Foreign Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Gomez Ruiz, who have been guests at the embassy for two days, are leaving today for New York, and soon after the first of the year they will return to Venezuela.

A luncheon in honor of the Foreign Minister was given yesterday by the Assistant Secretary of State, Edward G. Miller, jr., at Prospect House, with covers laid for 17.

Senora de Gomez Ruiz was entertained at luncheon by Senora Ana Luisa Branger, cultural attache at the Venezuelan Embassy. The party was given in the Palladian Room at the Shoreham Hotel. Senora de Pocaterra, wife of the Ambassador, and Senora de Carnevali, wife of the Venezuelan Ambassador to the OAS, were guests.

The Ambassador to the OAS and Senora de Carnevali sponsored a concert of music last evening at the Pan American Union by Venezuelan artists Fedora Aleman, soprano, and Maria Luisa Escobar, pianist and composer.

Washingtonians with a penchant for Latin-American music had an enjoyable evening listening to native songs and dance melodies arranged by Miss Escobar who has specialized in the study of the music of aboriginal Venezuelan tribes. Miss Aleman sang in costume.

Nicaraguan Ambassador Host

THE Nicaraguan Ambassador, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa was host at luncheon yesterday at the Carlton Hotel in honor of Gaspar Sanz y Tovar, Spanish Ambassador to Nicaragua, and former Counselor of the Spanish Embassy here. There were 19 in the company, including several Latin American envoys.

BIRTHDAY parties went in threes yesterday. The Yugoslav Ambassador, Sava Kosanovic, and his sister, Mme. Mica Trbojevic, had an informal celebration of their birthdays at the embassy last evening, while at the Lounge Riviera, Hotel 2400, Mme. Vladimir Rybar was guest of honor at a table of 30 at the dinner dance for the benefit of the National Homeopathic Hospital, given by the Women's Board of the hospital.

About Instructions for Making Draw Draperies

Could you tell me where I could obtain instructions for making draw drapes? I have a 15-foot rod, but there were no instructions on how to sew and attach the drapes. J. W.

You can get a booklet which contains complete instructions for making curtains and draperies by writing Better Homes and Gardens, 9509 Meredith Bldg., Des Moines 3, Iowa. Ask for the booklet called "Well-Dressed Windows" and send 25 cents to cover the book's cost.

Can you tell me how to clean or restore tarnished gold or gilt braid used on officers' uniforms? E. A. M.

Here is a method which one of our readers has used successfully and may work for you. Dampen a white cloth with vinegar, lay it over the tarnished braid and lightly press it with an iron. It seems it is the steam from the vinegar which does the trick if it can be done.

Is there any concern in Washington which buys and sells used electrical appliances? I have a roasterette, broiler, and a mixer which I would like to dispose of. M. M.

There is a shop located at 1620 Wisconsin ave. (telephone Hudson 3555) which resells electrical appliances and all household items. I suggest you call there.

K. M. of Washington writes to add the American Friends Service Committee, 20 South 12th st., Philadelphia, Pa., to the list of organizations to which used glasses can be sent. This organization uses the glasses for needy in Europe.

Another organization which uses old frames and lenses is: "Living Aids," 500 Park ave., New York 22, N. Y.

I wish to thank the two readers who have added these organizations to our list.

M. M. H., M. R., A. F., C. H., E. G. W. of Washington, M. T. M. of Lorton, Va., J. F. P. of Takoma Park have sent in the address for "The Eyes of the Needy, Inc.," Short Hills, N. J., an organization which also has need for used lenses and frames.

Thank you all for this information!

In removing oil spots with spot remover and magnesia from wall paper, brown rings were left on the paper. How can these rings be removed? Can they be prevented in cleaning oil or grease from wall paper? G.L.C.

If the paper is not new and somewhat soiled over the entire surface, a ring will develop at the edge of the application of paste. Such a ring cannot always be removed, but you might try by applying a paste made by mixing corn starch and water. Let it remain on the wall paper until dry and brush away. Repeat if improvement is noticed but the stain is not completely removed the first time.

All of the rubber dolls are advertised and labeled "washable," but I have been unable to remove even the slightest soil with soap and water. Can you tell me how to clean them? E.L.A.

Because the rubber on these dolls is porous, sometimes fairly drastic washing methods must be used to get them clean. The following method will not harm the rubber: Start with brown laundry soap applied with a soft brush. Rub the dampened brush onto the bar of soap and then onto the rubber. If this doesn't budge deep down soil, touch the brush to some kitchen cleansing powder after soaping it. When the doll has been scrubbed all over, and is clean, rinse thoroughly with several rinsings of clear water and dry.

I wish to thank E. M., E. M. M., A. W. A., and F. W. of Washington; also F. L. A. of Jessup, Md., who have sent in patterns and directions for frog bean bags.

Will you tell me how to remove some cement glue from the top of a small, highly finished mahogany table? Can this be done without taking the finish off as well? E. M.

No, I'm afraid that anything which will remove the glue will remove the finish with it. You may be able to make the stain less conspicuous by rubbing it with a mild abrasive such as rottenstone or pumice and oil. This should smooth the cement somewhat and make it blend into the surface better. When smoothing is finished, give the entire table top a good rubbing with furniture polish.

If this doesn't remove the stain enough to make the table usable, refinishing the top is the only solution.

When I have had my house painted at different times the painters have been somewhat careless in painting the windows with the result that paint has been splashed on the panes. While this is not particularly noticeable I would like to have it removed, and I am wondering if there is any kind of liquid that can be applied to remove it. I am afraid it would be a hopeless task to go over all the windows with a scraper. A READER.

You could apply a good commercial paint remover to soften the paint on the window panes. Let it stand for a few minutes to soften the paint and then wipe off.

PETUNIA!

People never Stop exclaiming
When you serve them
Something flaming!

And flaming mincemeat is especially fine, Petunia! Heat brandy — arrange mincemeat on a hot serving platter—pour brandy over it—and light. When the flame dies, serve the mincemeat over ice cream.

Bishop-Bracken

Take care not to get the remover on the frame, for, of course, it will take the paint off there, too!

Do you know of any organization that would use candle ends? I have a lot of them, too short to burn, which I hate to just throw away if anyone would use them. A. G. H.

Girl Scout and Brownie troops are sometimes glad to have short candles to use in their craft projects. They remake them into small floating candles or the very large candles which can be decorated. I suggest you call the Girl Scouts of the District of Columbia for the name of a troop near you which might use them.

I have recently taken up crocheting and have made some lovely frilly doilies for a pair of end tables. Now, I find that after all my painstaking work on them I can't seem to keep them looking perky with the ruffles standing in place. I starch them with a slightly diluted starch mixture and spend a half hour of my precious time ironing each one. The result is that they look beautiful for about two days, then they go as limp as a wet cloth and I have to start the starching procedure all over again. W. B.

Wilting of fluffy lace doilies is usually more prevalent in the summertime when, as a rule, humidity is higher. However, if you have a large amount of moisture in your home even for short periods in the day when food is boiling in the stove, baths are being taken, or laundry done, it might affect the stiffness of your doilies. If at any time there is enough moisture in your house to cause it to collect on the window panes, this might be the cause, in which case the obvious suggestion is to keep kitchen, bath, or laundry room doors closed to confine moisture-laden air.

If there is no unusual moisture situation in your house, then we should point an accusing finger at the starch or method for its preparation. I suggest you use a boiled starch, prepared according to the formula for heavy starch on the package. Before emersing the doily, have it as free from water as possible, or even dry, so as not to dilute the starch. Allow it to dry completely after starching it; if it isn't stiff enough give it another dipping in starch. Allow it to dry completely again, sprinkle and iron until absolutely dry.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Following Nervous Breakdown, Woman Undertook Psychiatric Treatment and Fell Madly In Love With Her Doctor, Thus Acquiring New Problem

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 33, married 12 years, have two children, and, unlike my husband, I have a warmly affectionate nature. He is undemonstrative, a slave to his business and a stickler for routine, and his difficulties with poor help in recent years sharpened his demands on me.

After a siege of emergency stress I had a nervous breakdown 18 months ago and for several weeks was given day care at a psychiatric institute, where I had insulin treatments and analytic interviews,—and where Dr. X revived my will to live, and also restored my self-respect and self-confidence.

Although I was quite hostile to other doctors on the premises, I liked Dr. X from the start. He is about my age, very kindly and understanding, and after some months I realized how much I cared for him, but I knew about emotional "transference" in these relationships, so I wasn't too worried.

In the spring, however, after failing to handle my feelings satisfactorily to myself, I made a clean breast of the problem to my doctor, knowing he could somehow help me. He said that by working through this emotion I could be happier than I'd ever been, and also tried to explain that my feelings were identical with those I had for my father—which I think is ridiculous.

Feels Disloyal to Her Husband

SINCE THEN, instead of getting over my feelings for Dr. X, I've only fallen more madly and hopelessly in love with him. I love and respect and admire him in a way I never dreamed I could love anyone. It is not sordid or cheap, but I know this whole thing is wrong, and yet I seem quite powerless to correct it.

Recently I told Dr. X that (1) we could continue analysis forever and I would never change; (2) that there was nothing more we could say or do; (3) that he never should have told me to accept this emotion for him; and (4) that control is the only way one ever acquires strength of character. But instead of having peace of mind after making a final break, I felt numb and empty. A day or so later I blacked out for a few minutes and this has been happening frequently since.

I've had to go back to the hospital for treatment and the doctor says if I continue in my own way I'll end up having amnesia. So now the analytic interviews have been resumed, once every two weeks, and I feel trapped. Seeing Dr. X is like torture or slow death; and I feel like an unfaithful wife, in heart and mind if not in fact. I am so completely different from the way I used to be that I don't know myself. Patients are supposed to outgrow transference, but I feel I am an exception. Any advice will be appreciated—and don't spare my feelings. I haven't any. R. S.

Doctor Worship Is Delusional

DEAR R. S.: To say that you've fallen more madly and hopelessly in love with Dr. X since last spring—when you first realized that your transference feelings were becoming burdensome—is to artlessly reveal (1) the delusional quality of your doctor worship, and (2) the neurotic anxieties, hopes and demands which underlie it.

What is meant when one speaks of being madly and hopelessly in love with another? It means that one is experiencing an urgently demanding feeling of total dependency upon another's personality and resources—as if one were an infant, naked, orphaned and needful of every form of devotional care, which the other alone could provide. Figuratively it is a desperate cry for womb-like protection.

The function of the analytic relationship is to bring to light the patient's psychological fetters—those hidden emotional factors in personality that keep him incapable of handling experience on the adult plane in a sensibly realistic, reasonably courageous way.

Case of Dependency Anxiously Misplaced

AT THAT PHASE of "transference" where you began to feel romantically in love with Dr. X, you were blundering into the hidden sector of infantile dependent traits in your nature, projecting them all at Dr. X in unconscious hope of evoking totally responsive "care" from this kindly sympathetic man,—and you were sugar-coating this campaign of infantile demands by calling it love of him.

It is my impression that Dr. X hasn't steered the case very well; that his interpretation and advices in the transference crisis fell short of the mark; and that your struggle to break out of the blind alley probably had real logic in it—of the will-to-survive variety. In blacking out, you were registering unbearable anxiety—and it was precautionary to return for further interviews. But in my opinion, either Dr. X needs specialist guidance in handling the case hereafter, or you should transfer to another analyst who has far greater vocational wisdom and maturity.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Toys can mess up the house and especially so at Christmas when friends and relatives pour them in. If you haven't worked out an entirely satisfactory system whereby Junior and Junior Miss easily can take care of their own toys, here's a workable idea that isn't too hard to get into operation.

Ask the corner grocer to save you two or three sturdy wooden boxes of the apple-box type. Soak off the labels, nail a couple of ½ by 2 or 3-inch strips lengthwise on the bottom to reinforce the boxes and to provide a foundation on which either casters or "domes of silence" can be fastened. Make loop handles for either end by inserting a short length of rope through two holes bored 4 or 5 inches apart. Tie knots on the inside that are heavy enough not to be pulled through.

If you wish, paint the boxes. Whether you do this or not, it is a good idea to paint or draw pictures on the outside showing the young what they are expected to keep inside. Thus, your version of several blocks piled on one another shows Junior that this is the block box. A few pieces of furniture sketched on side or end gives the idea to Junior Miss.

The boxes, even when full, can be pulled easily to the spot where they are kept. Youngsters will enjoy their toy "trucks" and be much more likely to pick up after themselves.

Bacon Can Be Baked

If you're expecting a crowd for a Sunday breakfast party and plan to serve bacon and eggs, an easy way to prepare the bacon is to place it on a rack set in a shallow pan and bake it in a hot (400 F.) oven for about 12 minutes, or until it is crisp and brown.

Federation Asks Truman Action on D. C. Vote

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday adopted a resolution calling upon President Truman to request national representation for the District of Columbia in his State of the Union message to Congress in January.

Specifically, the resolution petitioned the Chief Executive to ask for favorable action on S. J. Res. 132, a bill presented by Senator Matthew Neely. This bill provides for national representation for the District of Columbia through an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

At the same time federation members unanimously confirmed a letter sent to the 48 presidents in the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Written by Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, local federation head, the letter appealed for help in obtaining national representation for the District.

Mrs. Magdeburger solicited the help of sister presidents in informing various State federation members of the District's voteless plight. Also, she urged that the five million GFWC members write their Senators and Representatives to support the Neely bill in Congress.

During a morning business session held at the Hamilton Hotel, the District Federation also requested the General Federation to reaffirm its stand on local suffrage and representation at the 1950 conclave in Boston.

In seeking this reaffirmation, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the District Federation's legislative department, pointed out that the General Federation had indorsed national representation at its 1944 Chicago convention. According to GFWC's constitution all resolutions become void if not reindorsed every six years.

Mrs. Wiley said that the effort to obtain home rule was being intensified because of discouragement in obtaining national representation. She emphasized that the two were not incompatible, declaring, "We can have both suffrage and national representation."

Mrs. Leslie W. Wright, legislative department chairman for the GFWC, maintained that since men didn't get anywhere in obtaining District suffrage or national representation: "Now we are appealing to the women to spearhead the drive."

Bergson Hits A. & P. Advertising Campaign

HERBERT A. Bergson, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Justice Department's Anti-Trust Division, yesterday accused the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. of conducting a "false and misleading" advertising campaign. He made the charge in a luncheon address before the Woman's National Democratic Club in a discussion of "The Government's Case Against the A. & P. Co."

According to Bergson, the A. & P. seeks to give the impression through advertising that the United States Government has unjustly reinterpreted the Sherman antitrust law in a recently filed civil suit against the company. A. & P.'s protest advertising implies that the low-price policy of the company is the target of the Government's suit.

This implication is false, the Assistant Attorney General said. He explained that the purpose of the present civil suit is to restrain the company from continuing certain price-fixing practices for which it has already been found guilty by a United States District Court. This conviction, which was upheld by a United States Court of Appeals last February, resulted in $175,000 fines, which were paid by the company. Mr. Bergson said that in its recent advertising campaign protesting the Government's present civil suit, the A. & P. willfully gave a false impression by omitting mention of this conviction and the resultant penalty.

Cites Ban on Conviction

MR. BERGSON said that A. & P. was convicted of violating the antitrust laws, not because it was big and efficient, but because of the "predatory application of its mass purchasing power, and the abuse of that power through boycotts, blacklisting, preferential rebates, price wars, and below-cost retailing in strategic areas in order to eliminate local competition."

He said that if A. & P. decided to take planned losses in one area so as to drive out competitors, the losses were made up by higher prices in other areas. In short, the housewife in Dallas, Tex., might pay much more for the same product than the Portland, Oreg., housewife.

"A. & P.'s prices to the consumer are not uniform and depend upon the company's plans for the particular area," Bergson said. "A. & P.'s own records show that planned losses had been taken simultaneously in as many as 30 percent of A. & P.'s 6000 stores, at the expense of customers in the remaining 4200 stores."

Mr. Bergson said that the A. & P. conviction was also based on the company's "abuse" of its supply and manufacturing divisions. He cited an instance where the company had obtained a 350-percent higher discount from an independent cereal manufacturer by threatening to set up its own manufacturing plant for the cereal in question.

With reference to the pending civil suit against A. & P., Mr. Bergson said that "the A. & P. has made it clear that it is incapable of abandoning its predatory activities merely because a court orders it to do so." He cited instances in which the company had previously ignored court orders to desist from certain merchandising practices.

For this reason, he said, the Government determined to go further and ask the court to separate the company into seven independent chains, and to divorce its manufacturing and processing operations from its retail operations—the basis of the civil action.

Council Backs Move For Traffic Control

In Hyattsville

Council Backs Church in Zone Battle

The Hyattsville City Council last night gave its support to the Hyattsville Presbyterian Church in a property snarl involving a Prince Georges County Commissioner.

In a resolution extending "moral support" to the church, the council voted to send letters to the Board of Zoning Appeals asking that the church be permitted to continue construction, suspended two weeks ago, of a Sunday school building at 42d ave. and Farragut st.

County Commissioner T. Hammond Welch advised the church that he believed they were violating "setback' provisions of the zoning law. He contended that the position of the Sunday School would damage the value of his property. The zoning board is expected to solve the problem.

In other matters, the Council last night instructed City Attorney Nicholas Orem to prepare four bills for the Maryland General Assembly's consideration in February. They would:

Empower the city to condemn property in or near commercial or business sections for parking lot purposes; renew the 50-foot "sideline" exemption on street and sidewalk improvements; provide for permanent improvement of alleys and for construction of subsidiary storm drainage on petition of property owners.

2 Boys Drown in Pond

Boston, Dec. 19 (AP)—Two 10-year-old boys drowned in a park pond today when they fell through thin ice. They were identified as Robert Bates and Robert Cogswell. Both of Boston's Dorchester section.

The Interfederation Council last night voted to ask the District Commissioners to head a movement to establish a metropolitan area authority to regulate transportation.

Put forth by Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, the motion grew out of a suggestion in a Washington Post editorial of December 12. The council is on record in favor of area-wide transportation regulation.

While reporting on the activities of the Arlington Civic Federation, Council Chairman William G. Watt noted that his federation's influence in county affairs is not affected by the fact citizens are governel by an elected county board.

Farmer Delegate Elected

Watt pointed out that a former federation delegate, Robert W. Cox, was recently elected to the county board, and Cox's campaign manager, T. Oscar Smith, is the new Arlington federation president.

Harry N. Stull, District delegate, commented that Arlington's experience is an effective answer to the argument that home rule for the District would detract from the Federation of Citizens Association's influence in District affairs.

Mrs. Sartwell reported a council committee will meet with the District Commissioners on January 5 to discuss the Commissioners' attitude to the Sasscer area bill.

W. F. Mulligan, Prince Georges County delegate, said he found several members of the Maryland State Legislature in favor of the Sasscer bill.

Coordinated Planning

Introduced in the first session of the Eighty-first Congress by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), the bill provides for establishment of a commission to study the possibilities of coordinated planning in the metropolitan area.

To take effect, the bill needs the approval of Virginia and Maryland Legislatures as well as congressional approval.

Chairman Watt appointed Stull, Mulligan, Allan B. Fay, of Montgomery County, Dr. R. A. Osborn, of Fairfax County, and William C. Hull, of Arlington County as a committee to nominate candidates for next month's election.

According to council custom, Mrs. Sartwell, the current first vice chairman, is to be elevated to chairman next year.

The council voted to hold its next meeting at the Webster House, 503 D st. nw.

Fort Davis

The Fort Davis Citizens Association last night called upon citizen groups to join in a move for revision of a 1939 law relating to the sale of park property.

Meeting at Ryland Methodist Church, Branch ave. and S st. se., the group called for a provision in the bill which would require the Government to advertise prospective sale of park property to individuals.

In a report submitted by the law and legislation committee, Sebastian Riccobono, chairman, it was reported the Interior Department sold a piece of Fort Dupont to an individual without notice to the community.

The group accepted a proposed revision of its constitution which includes provisions for moving the annual elections from April to May, and for making new members wait a month after joining before becoming eligible to vote.

Randle Highlands

The Randle Highland Citizens Association conducted a Christmas program last night at L'Enfant Square, Pennsylvania and Minnesota aves. se. The ceremonies marked the lighting of a tree and other ornaments set up by the Southeast Businessmen's Association.

Music was provided by the Anacostia High School Glee Club and sixth grade students at the Randle Highland School. Invocation was given by the Rev. James Brooks, pastor of Our Lady Queen of Peace Church, and benediction was by the Rev. Frank B. Burress, pastor of the Fountain Memorial Baptist Church.

David C. Williams, president of the association, presided.

Republic Follows U. S. Steel; Hikes Prices $4 a Ton

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 19 (U.P.)—Republic Steel Corp., third largest producer in the Nation, tonight announced an increase in its steel prices "of approximately 4 percent."

(At Middletown, Ohio, Armco Steel Corp. announced similar increases.)

The 4 percent increase, which Republic called "exceedingly modest," figures out to about $4 a ton, or the same as the increase announced last Friday by the giant United States Steel Corp.

Red China Disaster For U.S., Says Shirer

By Civic Group

Silver Spring 'Spot' Zoning Protested

Recent "spot" rezonings in the Silver Spring area by the Montgomery County Council were bitterly protested last night by members of the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring.

More than 50 delegates met at the Grace Church Parish Hall to oppose the action. They referred to rezoning of three lots on Ellsworth dr. and Fenton st. from residential A to commercial B.

Members argued that the action extended the commorcial area beyond that called for in a master zoning plan for Silver Spring.

The group also drafted a request to the county council calling for an outright grant from the Federal Government to be used to provide adequate school facilities in the area and indorsed a proposed ordinance that would make rabies vaccinations compulsory for all dogs in the county.

Lower Egg Price Support Believed Likely After Jan. 1

By the United Press

Agriculture Department sources said yesterday the Government is almost certain to lower price support for eggs, effective January 1.

The question of how much was discussed at a closed-door meeting of department policy-makers.

"No decisions were reached," a spokesman said. "Egg supports will be taken up again in another meeting Wednesday. We hope to reach a decision soon."

Communist China represents a disaster for the United States, and Titoist Yugoslavia a disaster for Russia, William L. Shirer said last night.

The noted news commentator and author spoke on a Washington Town Hall program at Constitution Hall before 1000 persons.

Shirer said the success of the Chinese Communists will mean a Communist world from the Elbe River in Europe across Asia, and said he would not be surprised if the United States recognizes the new Chinese regime "sooner than we might believe."

Titoism in China?

Shirer said he has been "amused at the reaction of some conservative businessmen in New York, who think maybe we might do business with Communist China and would not mind if we recognized her tomorrow."

Shirer said he would "hazard a guess that if the Russians attempt to dictate to Communist China, they will be met with Titoism.

"Few Americans realize the seriousness of the crisis in Communism brought about by the defiance of Marshal Tito," Shirer said. "It is the worst crisis since Lenin came to power."

Asserting the whole structure of world Communism will collapse if Marshall Stalin allowed Tito to get away with it, Shirer asked, "Can Tito survive?—Yes, if he is not bumped off by the Russians. The Yugoslavs believe that in the coming months attempts on him will be made."

Germans Unchanged

Shirer said "two world wars have not solved the German problem. The German people remain essentially unchanged, yearing for another Hitler, regretting not that they started the war, but that they lost it. It is becoming a hotbed of nazism."

The United States has succeeded only in demobilizing Germany, he said, adding, "I wish I could find out why our Government won't even tell us the truth about Germany."

Shirer also said he does not believe the American Government is "taking us into full confidence about the Marshall Plan."

Radioman Pleads Guilty as Spy for France in Poland

Wroclaw, Poland, Dec. 19 (AP).—Josef Feldeisen, 50, a French radio expert, pleaded guilty before a military court here today to charges of spying on behalf of France.

He was the fourth person to enter such a plea since the trial opened Friday. Guilty pleas had been recorded previously for Yvonne Bassalaer, 29, former secretary of the French Consulate in Warsaw; Jan Kubisiak, 26, a Polish student who said Miss Bassalier was his boss, and Basil Brousikow, a former messenger.

Feldisen testified that he had been requested by Aymar de Brossin De Mere, a French Embassy official, to obtain information relating to airfields, industrial plants and secret matter concerning Polish coal mines. The embassy official was ordered out of the country last month.

Bailiff Fined

Monterey, Calif. (U.P.).—There were two Bailiffs in court when Judge Monty Hellam arrived so he fined one of them $50. The one he fined was Richard I. Bailiff, charged with smoking in bed. The other was the usual court attendant.

Celebrities Plane Is Forced Down

Langley Air Force Base, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—An Air Force C-54 carrying 12 stage and screen personalities including Shirley Ross, Hillary Brooks, Gene Raymond and Maxie Rosenbloom was forced down here today.

The plane, en route from Hollywood to Weisbaden Air Force Base, Germany, by way of the Washington National Airport, was forced to land at Langley when weather conditions over Washington grounded airport traffic. A three-week tour during the Christmas holidays has been planned for the troupe by Constance Bennett, president of the junket. Miss Bennett's husband, Col. John T. Coulter, is commanding officer of the Weisbaden Air Force Base.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Thursday night Happy Chandler was the guest of honor at a dinner for sport notables at the City Athletic Club. It was his assignment to introduce the others, including Leo Durocher . . . This was Chandler's first public announcement of his sentiments toward the Giants' manager who, as manager of the Dodgers, once had been suspended for a full season by the commissioner of baseball. Durocher's introduction drew the most cheers. Chandler listened to the cheers, and then told the audience: "This proves the truth contained in the Bible: 'There's more rejoicing over the one that was lost and returned than over the other 99'."

Victor Reuther, the Detroit union leader who lost his eye when he was shot at by men still uncaught, recently was introduced to the Lone Ranger. Reuther told his three children about this meeting, and they were quite impressed—particularly when the Lone Ranger followed through by sending his Christmas cards to each youngster . . . Carol Reuther, age 10, wrote the acknowledgement in behalf of herself and her two younger brothers. In her letter she expressed appreciation for this thoughtfulness, and added: "You always get the outlaws, and we wonder if you could catch the bad men who shot our daddy."

The Voice of America has a number of mobile information units, in which are contained a movie-projector, radio, wire-recorder, kitchen, loudspeaker, etc. Each truck goes from village to vilage, showing movies to the people who've never seen any, and recording their reactions. In a Chinese village, one afternoon, a man approached the Voice of America's truck and asked the unit-director to show the movies to his villagers high in the mountain. "We can't get the truck up there," said the American. "There's no road" . . . One month later the Chinese man came to him again, renewed his plea, and explained: "Every man and woman worked on it—and now we have a road."

A Hollywood producer, studying the publicity on the Rita Hayworth and Ingrid Bergman stories, suggests that newspapers could simplify it for their readers if, in each story about these two stars, a calendar were inserted . . . Noel Coward showed his movie, "The Astonished Heart," to Sir Laurence Olivier, for advice on the scenes in which Coward appeared. Coward trusts Olivier's judgment, and made re-takes he suggested.

Christmas 'Round the World

Germany Sent Her Customs

By Richard M. Barr

(Copyright, 1949, by United Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Chapter Two

ASK the average American what country first comes to mind when you speak of the origin of American Christmas customs, and he'll most likely say Germany.

Actually, many of our Christmas customs today do come from Germany. There are many reasons for this. Probably the most important is that Germans were one of the largest European groups to help settle America. They brought their Christmas traditions with them.

In Germany today, however, Christmas celebrations have changed. Part of this is due to the lingering influence of Hitlerism, which tried to substitute the pagan cult of Nazi Philosopher Alfred Rosenberg for Christian ideals and customs. Partly, also, the change is due to the widespread destruction of the war.

But Christmas this year will be the happiest the Germans have celebrated since 1939. Certainly in the new West German Republic, old customs and old traditions have been revived, so that once again there's a semblance of prewar German "gemutlichkeit," or good living.

Christmas begins in Germany with the first Sunday in December. On that day homes are decorated with branches of fir. Lighted candles appear in the windows. A large wreath is placed on the dining table, surrounding four candles.

Every Sunday night one of the candles is lit, so that on Holy Night all four of the tapers join in lighting the room.

On the first Sunday of the twelfth month, the first Christmas cookies are eaten. And on that day also, the grown-ups and the children begin preparing their Christmas presents.

Arrives Early

ON THE night of that first Sunday, the Christmas Man comes after the children are asleep. He collects their letters requesting gifts.

Among poorer families, the children generally ask that the Christmas Man fix a broken toy or repair a damaged doll. The Christmas Man has never failed as Mr. Fix-it.

On the second Sunday in December come the first Christmas gifts of the season. That night, before the children go to bed, they carefully leave a shoe in front of their door or window. Then, after they've drifted off to sleep, Santa Claus and his helper (usually an angel from Heaven) drop by and fill the shoe with nuts and candy and apples.

The belief in Santa Claus or St. Nicholas as a giver of Christmas presents comes from an old German legend.

St. Nicholas learned of three beautiful young girls who had no suitors, because their father was too poor to provide them with a dowry.

So one night, the good Saint filled three bags with gold. Then he crept out to the house of the three girls and threw the bags into the windows of their bedroom. Soon after, they were happily married. And ever since then, unexpected gifts are said to come from St. Nicholas—or Santa Claus.

But the story that Santa comes down the chimney originated with the Norsemen. Their legend is that at the winter solstice the goddess Hertha appears in the fireplace and brings with her happiness and good fortune. The good fortune is sometimes in the form of a roly poly, bewhiskered old gentleman who comes down the chimney to meet her.

Sometimes, in Germany, Santa Claus will appear on the afternoon of the second Sunday, instead of waiting for night. Then, all the little children of the neighborhood gather at a friend's house for a party, where Santa distributes his gifts.

Peculiarly, old Santa seems to know all of those present. He calls them by name, he knows who the good boys and girls are, and he also knows the girls and boys who have been unruly during the year.

Santa a Priest

IN DIFFERENT parts of Germany, Santa Claus appears in various costumes. In most parts, however, he's an old man, with a long white beard. Frequently he wears a long red coat and a big red hat with white fur on it.

In the more religious areas of prewar Germany, such as southern Bavaria, he dresses as a priest, wearing the robe of Catholic churchmen. He was usually accompanied, then, by the older girls of the neighborhood, who dressed as angels.

In the poorer sections of eastern Bavaria he was just an ordinary woodchopper. In northern Germany, up near the Baltic Sea, he appeared as a fisherman.

Finally, according to tradition, there comes the big Christmas event in Germany—celebration of Holy Night, or Christmas Eve.

All decorations must be renewed during the day, and every house has a fir tree. Even the humblest home in Germany that day has its Christmas tree.

First American Trees

FIRST mention of a Christmas tree in Germany was in 1605, when one was set up in Strassburg.

There's a tradition, though, that Martin Luther, in the previous century, took an evergreen tree home to his children and decorated it for Christmas—thus beginning the custom.

Christmas trees were introduced to the United States by German immigrants, sometime in the latter part of the 1700's.

On the afternoon of Christmas Eve, the whole family in Germany goes to special church services, to prepare for Holy Night festivities.

On returning home, the children gather 'round the tree, where Santa Claus has left their gifts while they were in church. Under the tree also, spread in wondrous glory, they find the Holy Family, together with the Three Kings and the shepherd tending his flock. Sometimes, these are plastic figurines, sometimes ordinary dolls.

After the gifts have been distributed, the family gathers around the tree, holding hands. Then they sing the old familiar tune:

"Stille nacht, Heilige nacht, alles ruht . . ." which we know as "Silent Night."

After that the children say their Christmas prayers, perhaps sing carols around the piano. Some of the songs are relatively modern, but the oldest German Christmas lieder date from the Eleventh Century.

To Touch Your Lips

You tell me that you love me and . . . I say I love you, dear . . . And nothing more is needed now . . . To make our meaning clear . . . And yet there is a loneliness . . . That lingers in my heart . . . And every day is gray because . . . We have to be apart . . . I read your words and hear your voice . . . And know that you are true . . . But, oh, I want you, darling and . . . I long to be with you . . . I cannot hold your hand by mail . . . Or kiss you on the phone . . . And in a thousand other ways . . . I have to be alone . . . I want to see your smile again . . . And take you in my arms . . . To touch your lips and feel the warmth . . . Of all your loving charms.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

For Once, the Innocent Bystander Has a Good Alibi

Several friends have asked me to explain why the left side of my car is bashed in. A few of these interrogators have even been a bit sarcastic.

"Aren't you the guy who's always lecturing us about driving carefully?" they ask.

Yes, I'm the guy. And I know my story sounds fishy. But it wasn't my fault.

As a matter of fact, I was sleeping peacefully the other morning when my wife rushed into the bedroom and woke me with:

"Get up, get up. You've just been in a traffic accident."

Through two years of traffic, public garages, and even parking lots, my car had emerged without so much as a scratch or a nick. Then a woman driver went crashing into it as it was parked in front of our house.

Excuse me (sob) but every time I think about it (sob) I feel like crying.

P. S.: Her insurance company concedes that it wasn't my fault. They're going to fix it up.

YOUR MOVE, DOC

Peter Cooper of 925 K st. se. wonders whether we've heard about the fellow who was being examined by a psychiatrist.

"Do you ever hear voices without being able to tell where they're coming from, or who is speaking?" asked the doctor.

"Yes sir," answered the patient. "Aha!" said the psychiatrist, "and when does this occur?"

"When I answer the telephone," came the reply.

SURPRISE ENDING

In my recent item about taxi drivers, I mentioned that they usually ignore a single fare to pick up groups of two or more whenever possible.

This practice makes life particularly difficult for the lone passenger who has been waiting for a long time, only to have a group of Johnny-come-latelies step from the curb 20 yards up the street and snag the first cab that passes.

It happened during one of our recent downpours to Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. The hacker passed her, and stopped instead in front of three men. But the three gentlemen (and I use the term advisedly) refused to get in.

"You were here first, Miss," called out one of the group. "Won't you take this cab?"

The hacker didn't think much of their chivalry, but Blanche thinks they were pretty wonderful. And so do I.

PERSONAL NOTES

Marion Moran, 1811 A st. se.: Good poem, but it not only appeared in the "Family Circle" as you indicated, but also in the phone company's "Transmitter," credited to "The Carbide News."

PET PEEVE

H. M. Hickerson of 3102 24th st. ne. asks: "Can't something be done to prevent big delivery trucks from blocking morning and evening rush hour traffic?"

HOW IT HAPPENED

With unanswered mail piling up in deplorable drifts on my desk, here's a chance to answer five complaints with one item. The letters are from Ralph W. Moore of 610 G st. se.; S. N. Bandel of 200 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Ross Mitchell; Norma H. Young of 3707 Woodley rd. nw.; and J. M. Gandee of the Veterans Hospital at Kecoughtan, Va.

They want to know why last Wednesday's Washington Post carried Tuesday's radio log.

Here's the explanation: The daily radio log is not set anew each day. Instead, seven "standing" logs are kept in type, one for each day of the week.

As the various radio stations change their schedules and notify us, we change the appropriate lines in the log. But most of the programs remain the same from one Tuesday to the next, or one Wednesday to the next, and there's no need to set those recurring listings over and over again.

Besides, there's a much greater chance for accuracy when most of the log, corrected and revised from the previous week, is "picked up."

But, unfortunately, we picked up the wrong day's log, and it ran through all editions before anybody noticed the mistake. Which just goes to prove that newspapermen who work on Tuesday nights are not familiar with Tuesday night radio program schedules.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE

The controversy over nylons on the shower curtain rod brings forth this suggestion from E.M.:

What you really think
Just hang your sox

'Wirepulling' Seen In Tax Case

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—This is the third in Drew Pearson's series of columns on tax evasion.)

It is not often that Treasury agents turn up a tax fraud case against a big corporation. This is partly because most big corporations have their books audited by reputable firms, and also because it is almost impossible for the T-men to scrutinize carefully the complicated books of the big corporations.

Pearson

The Internal Revenue Bureau is so understaffed—thanks largely to the recent GOP Eightieth Congress—that it is impossible for its agents to take enough time to go through all corporate books.

Recently, however, Treasury agents stumbled into what they considered an airtight tax fraud case against the Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. of Tulsa, Okla.

The case was considered so airtight that there was not the slightest doubt, they thought, about criminal prosecution. However, the wire-pullers got busy and the criminal aspects of the Mid-Continent case are now on ice.

The oil company will not have to pay a tax bill of six million dollars plus 50 percent penalty, as recommended by the T-men. Instead, honest taxpayers will have to make up the difference.

The reason the Treasury's case against Mid-Continent was considered so airtight was that a former accountant for the company had furnished the evidence for the Government.

While working for the company, he had caught it making capital expenditures for plant expansion during the war years and then charging them up as "repairs."

Receipts Destroyed

Though the lower offices of Mid-Continent showed the real nature of the improvements, these improvements were changed to read "repairs," when the books went up to the top office. Repairs, of course, are tax-deductible, while improvements are a capital investment and not deductible.

Mid-Continent officials gave careful instructions that the receipts and orders for the improvements be destroyed, but one of its bookkeepers just as carefully retained them and turned them over to the Treasury. As a result, the case was considered ironclad.

The agent who first handled this case was Frank W. Lohn, chief of intelligence for the Kansas City district. He recommended criminal prosecution and sent the case on to Mike Seltzer, chief of the Penal Division of the Kansas City office.

But while the case was still pending in Kansas City, Daniel Bolich, deputy commissioner of Internal Revenue in Washington, requested a conference at Oklahoma City. This was held; and Bolich, for reasons best known to himself, came all the way to Oklahoma from Washington to participate in the conference. Lohn and Seltzer, who also participated, informed him that the Mid-Continent case was fraud and should be prosecuted.

Despite this, Commissioner Bolich ordered the investigation stopped and had the case transferred to Washington.

When the case reached Washington, a conference was held in Bolich's office, at which General Counsel Charles Oliphant was not represented. This is highly unusual. For, ordinarily, a criminal case must go to the chief counsel's office for disposal. It does not go to the office of a deputy commissioner.

However, Bolich ordered it to his office and, although the general counsel was not represented, the defaulting oil company was represented by Benjamin Saunders of the law firm of Charley Hamel.

Hamel, former head of the Board of Tax Appeals and formerly in the Internal Revenue Bureau, is a Republican who sometimes has been retained by leading Democrats suffering from tax troubles. It was Hamel who expertly handled the income-tax cases of Boss Frank Hague of Jersey City and Mayor Ed Kelly of Chicago, both during the Hoover Administration.

Fraud Penalty Vetoed

At this conference, Commissioner Bolich finally decided to let Mid-Continent off for $3 million—instead of $6 million recommended by the T-men. He also decided against any appreciable fraud penalty.

Only after this was decided did Bolich send the case to General Counsel Oliphant with instructions to close the penal side of the case—in other words, drop criminal prosecution.

Deputy Commissioner Bolich was former head of Internal Revenue Intelligence in New York, at which time he was close to many Tammany leaders. He was sent to his present key spot in Washington by Joe Nunan, another Tammany man, who once served as Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Since resigning, Nunan has been one of the most prosperous tax lawyers in the country.

Mid-Continent is headed by Jacob France, Republican Committeeman from Maryland and chairman of the Equitable Trust. Co. of Baltimore, a director of Maryland Title Guarantee Co. and of the Commercial National Bank of New York.

Mid-Continent's vice president and secretary is E. McClure Rouzer, who is France's law partner, and a director of various Maryland concerns. Other directors include Russell Faris, chairman of the Ward Baking Co.; Maurice Newton, a partner of Hallgarten & Co., and a director of Adams Express, Anaconda Copper, Paramount Pictures, Gotham Hosiery and the Waldorf-Astoria; Otis McClintock, head of the First National Bank and Trust of Tulsa and director of the Frisco Railroad.

Mid-Continent owns or leases 65,427 acres of oil and gas leases in Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas, Arkansas and New Mexico, on which it operates a total of 1830 oil wells and 50 gas wells.
